

THE anti-saloon league, it seems, is going to stand pat. It will not try to get a dry plank in any party platform. The constitution of the United States is a dry plank in itself, and the oath of office is a pledge to support it. Loyalty to the constitution, and to the obligations to "see that the laws are enforced," is all that it will ask. If both parties do that, in their platforms and in the policies of their candidates, the anti-saloon league has nothing to say. It stands pat.

PROHIBITION will therefore not be an issue next year unless the "wets" make it so. The drys do not plan to confuse the contest or disturb the parties with it. So far as they are concerned, there is nothing to say and nothing to do, except which the constitution already says and the law requires. No man can become President without taking an oath to do this. There is nothing to disturb unless somebody disturbs it, and nothing to agitate unless somebody agitates it. The drys, for their part, will not start anything.

BUT beware of a fight if anybody does start it! Let any party put in a wet plank, or nominate a wet candidate, and there will be a turmoil which will obliterate all other issues. It will be a disturbance, at that, which will accomplish absolutely nothing. Counting up wet, dry and doubtful districts, there is no possibility whatever of electing a congress which would pass a wet law. Even if that miracle could happen, the Supreme court would set aside the law. Nothing at all can be done, so long as thirteen states refuse their consent, and there are many more than thirteen which no one expects to give that consent, now or in any time in the future with which practical plans need to reckon. Nothing can be accomplished, and little noise and agitation. But this will not be started unless the wets start it. In the interest of peace, and of a chance to discuss other issues, it is to be hoped that the excellent example of the anti-saloon league will be followed.

FRENCH flyers, contemplating a race to America, profess much amusement at the health certificate given them, to comply with the American immigration law. Surely the ability to pilot a plane thirty or more hours over the ocean ought to be its own health certificate, they say.

Quite true. But who are they that they should criticize the absurdity of requiring a paper certificate, in a case in which it is obviously not needed? Let any American try to get married in France. The very first thing they will require of him is a birth certificate. Surely, if flying across the ocean is evidence of health, being alive at all is even better evidence of having been born. But not in France. Legally, you have not been born there unless you have a paper so certifying.

THE newest suggestion for the presidential field is Senator Norris, of Nebraska, submitted by Senator Brookhart, of Iowa. Norris is a good man, not very much too radical, but probably more so than would be acceptable in the mood of the people this year or next. But if he wishes to be taken seriously, he should seek a sounder sponsor than Brookhart. Otherwise, he will appear to the people as a pure insurgent. If they wanted that, they would turn to Borah, the champion off-horse of them all, rather than to a less-known man like Norris.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE quite properly disclaims the rumors that he is to take the presidency of the steel trust, for which he is not fitted or the presidency of Amherst College, for which he is fitted, but in which there is no prospective vacancy. The president will not lack for opportunities. He once said, no doubt facetiously, that he could if necessary support himself on the Vermont farm, inherited from his father. Doubtless he could; and, doubtless also, he would. He will have his $10,000 Carnegie pension (which ought to be a government one) and he can earn as much more as he likes. A man whom business trusts as president is a man whom it would trust in other capacities. If President Coolidge seeks occupation, he will not lack it.

BUT why should an ex-president have any occupation at all? He ought not to have to make his living. The nation, for its own dignity, should see to that. And there is no service which he could render so valuable as that which his unique experience could give to the United States. Any man who has been president, if he has any brains at all, has had an education in government such as no other person in America possesses. If perhaps after

Arizona Offered New Concessions

ARBITRATION AGAIN URGED BY GOVERNOR

Apache State Delegation Counters Young Proposal with Own Proposition

STILL WANT CONTROL

Consistent in Demand for Half of Water Allotted From Colorado Stream

(By United Press)
DENVER, Aug. 23.—What they termed "further concessions" were offered by California delegates to Arizona at the seven-state Colorado river conference here today.

Arizona consistently has asked for one-half of the water allotted from the Colorado river to that state and California. California has insisted upon two-thirds: Today's "further concessions" by California were as follows:

1. To Arizona and Nevada, their tributary waters, subject, however, to the condition that any tributary waters not so used and reaching the main stream shall be considered part of the main stream flow for the purposes of agreement.
2. To Nevada, 300,000 acre feet per annum from the main stream.
3. To Arizona, her present perfected rights to 233,500 acre feet per annum and to California, her perfected rights to 2,159,000 acre feet per annum from the main stream; the balance of the water below Lee ferry to be divided equally between Arizona and California.

Arbitration Is Urged

If the offer is unacceptable to Arizona, Gov. C. C. Young, of California, said he believed the dispute between the two states should be arbitrated as he had suggested at the opening meeting of the conference yesterday.

Not mentioning water rights already perfected, Arizona countered with the following proposition:

1. That 300,000 acre feet of the lower basin's share be given to Nevada and the remainder, after such deductions as may be made to care for Mexican lands, be divided equally between California and Arizona.
2. Waters of tributary streams, which enter the river below Lee ferry and which are inadequate to develop their own valleys, must revert to the states in which they are located.
3. Any compact dividing waters of the river and its tributaries shall not impair the rights of the states under their respective water laws to control appropriation of water within their boundaries.

After listening to propositions made by both sides, delegates from California and Arizona appeared to be as far from agreement as ever. Neither group evidenced any disposition to accept the proposal made by the other.

Asked whether California's "concessions" was acceptable to Arizona, Gov. George W. P. Hunt, of that state, declared:

"Hell, no. What we want is a square deal.
Arizona is entitled to all the water it can use for future irrigation development. Thomas Maddock, former Arizona state engineer, contended.
"Between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 more feet of water goes into the Colorado river from Arizona tributaries," he said. "Arizona can use part of this water and part it cannot use. The very existence of Arizona depends on an equal distribution of this tributary water."
Maddock declared that his state is not opposed to a dam in Boulder canyon, but that it is opposed to the location as set forth in the Swing-Johnson bill.
"We admit that there must be a dam in Boulder canyon," he said. "But Arizona will insist that it be located somewhere else, preferably at a higher elevation."
Laughs at Trust Charges
Maddock laughed off charges that Arizona is dominated by a power trust.
"The arbitration board suggested by the governor of California to settle the differences between that state and Arizona would be unsatisfactory because it would have on it federal engineers who are biased in favor of California," Maddock charged.
The Mexican situation, he added, needs immediate attention.
The reason Arizona is arguing the Swing-Johnson bill is that it does not provide for curtailment of Mexican rights to water from the river, Maddock declared.

MAC CRACKEN IS OPPOSED TO TRANS-OCEAN PLANE DERBIES

Race Element Is Drawback In Pioneering

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. MacCracken Jr., the government's supervisor of commercial aviation, personally opposes, in general principle, prize flights across the ocean.

But if another flight to Hawaii, similar to the Dole "derby," were organized, he would not try to stop it. He merely would regulate it.

He would be more cautious in the inspection of aircraft attempting it. He would not prohibit a "reasonable and practicable" prize flight. And he considers the Hawaiian hop a "reasonable and practicable" venture because it has been accomplished successfully four times.

Thus MacCracken summed up today, in an exclusive United Press interview, his views of the controversy that has arisen since the seven Dole aviators dropped beyond knowledge of the world.

MacCracken does not intend to ask congress to enact a law to prohibit such flights, as some have advocated.

Can't Stop Flights

He has no power to stop trans-oceanic flights, under the present law, which does not require licensing of planes in "foreign" commerce. The Hawaiian flight, however, was to an American insular possession and therefore the planes entered it were inspected according to law.

MacCracken advocated licensing of planes in foreign as well as domestic commerce, but congress did not follow this suggestion. If the law were so amended, planes making trans-oceanic flights would have to be licensed. All planes making the recent European flights were licensed.

The air commerce head made these further observations:

1. Pioneering in aviation should be left to the army, navy or well-financed private ventures in which plenty of time is allowed for careful preparations, as in the transatlantic flights.
2. Aviation pioneering necessarily brings more casualties than commercial flying.
3. Pioneer failures should not be "chained up" against commercial aviation.

Hurts Commercial Flying

So much publicity to the Dole flight accidents hurts commercial aviation, he said.

"The Hawaiian flight is not nearly so bad as the fatal accidents caused by inexperienced flyers flying in this country without licenses," he said. "This latter must be stopped.
"Personally, I think the race element is somewhat of a drawback when a certain time is set and several planes gather for a contest on a difficult flight. The best way is to have some private individual back pioneering flights, so that every precaution may be taken. And plenty of time should be allowed.

"It probably is safer to have the army and navy do our air pioneering. On the other hand, under private supervision, commercial aviators can give a good account of themselves, as Lindbergh and Chamberlin did.
"Even in army and navy pioneering, though, there is loss of life, despite everything that can be done and that fact must be recognized."

House Collapse Is Investigated

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—An investigation to fix responsibility for the collapse of a two-story building here, which resulted in one death and four injuries, today was started by city and county officials.
Workmen were in a 16-foot hole under the foundation of the structure, excavating for a two-story building adjoining the one which collapsed. Preliminary investigation is said to indicate either improper underpinning or shifting soil.
The dead worker, A. Acosta, 19, was hit by a heavy foundation slab which pinned him for three hours before he could be removed.

HOPE FOR SEVEN MISSING FLYERS ALL BUT VANISHED

Angeles Forest Blaze Still Out Of Control

PASADENA, Aug. 23.—Fire that has burned over 8000 acres in Angeles National forest in the last 48 hours still is out of control, Supervisor G. H. Cecil reported.

The blaze, located 60 miles northwest of here, now is in the sawmill district, having devastated Bear and Pine canyons, according to Cecil.

BEQUESTS OF TWO MILLION IN GARY WILL

No Estimate of Value of Late Steel King's Estate Given

(By United Press)
MINEOLA, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The will of the late Elbert H. Gary, former chairman of the United States Steel corporation, was filed for probate here today.

It contained no estimate of the value of the estate beyond the usual declaration that it amounted to more than $10,000.

It contained specific bequests amounting to more than $2,000,000. The will creates two trust funds of $800,000 each for Mrs. Gertrude Gary Sutcliffe and Mrs. Bertha Gary Campbell, Gary's two daughters by his first marriage. They will receive the income from these funds for life. On the death of Mrs. Sutcliffe, the income from the fund set aside for her goes to her son, Elbert Gary Sutcliffe. The income from the fund set aside for Mrs. Campbell, on her death, will go to her daughter, Julian Elizabeth Campbell.

Income Pass Down
On the death of the children, the incomes go to their children or if they leave no children, to other heirs.
The will was made Oct. 24, 1925, and names the New York Trust company executor and trustee of the estate.

It sets forth that there are no debts or claims against the estate "except such as are public and well known, including principally an indebtedness of $100,000 to the Chatham Phoenix Bank and Trust company, duly secured."

A trust fund of $300,000 is set up for Elbert Gary Sutcliffe, grandson of the steel magnate, and a similar fund for Julia Elizabeth Campbell, granddaughter. They are to receive the income and on their deaths their heirs are to receive it.

Judge Gary bequeathed the cemetery plot of the Gary family, including a large marble mausoleum, to his daughters and directed that his body be placed in one of the crypts there—as was done. It specified that the body of his first wife should be placed in an adjoining crypt and on the death of his second wife, her body also is to be placed there.

NEW BREAK THREATENED IN RANKS OF ANGELUS TEMPLE

(By United Press)
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—A new break in the ranks of Angelus temple threatened today, following the resignation of Max X. Clark, pastor of a branch church of the Four Square Gospel, of which Aimee McPherson is the leader.
Clark, pastor of the Hermosa-Manhattan Beach branch, declared that he did not approve of the recent proceedings which resulted in Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Mrs. McPherson, being ousted from control of the temple.

Clark was at one time identified with the Assemblies of God, a pentecostal organization, of Springfield, Mo. He said his decision to resign followed Mrs. McPherson's asserted move to relieve her mother of all power, also the recent reorganization of the Four Square Gospel.

He said he objected to the wearing of uniforms by temple workers and the creation of titles such as is planned under the Four Square Gospel Light-house.

Naval Forces Prepare for Last Effort to Find Trace of Planes

(By United Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Weary eyed from continuous watching of sea and air and with minds heavy from the alternate shocks of hopeful reports and their subsequent failure of verification, the crews of the scores of naval and merchant craft braced themselves today for one more last effort to find the missing Dole race flyers. For not until Thursday will the navy abandon its intensive search for the "Miss Doran," "Golden Eagle" and "Dallas Spirit."

But, although all night the pencils of searchlights peered over every yard of the vast area near the point where Capt. Bill Erwin's Dallas Spirit was downed, and the territory beyond it in which the other planes are sought, hope had all but vanished this morning.

Even Mrs. Florence Eichwald, mother of Erwin's navigator, Al Eichwald, finally has reconciled herself to belief that when the cheery trail of persiflage, which her son and Erwin were broadcast, as their motor droned toward Hawaii, was interrupted by tragic report of a tailspin and silence—the plane plunged down in the sea, carrying the two men with it.

Mother Finds Comfort
"It is good to feel that he went from this earth to such a happy spirit," she says. "It was his idea to search the seas for the 'Miss Doran' and the 'Golden Eagle.' I am glad, if the end has come, that it came while my son was on an errand of mercy. I shall feel his life was not in vain, as I know he felt he was doing something for aviation."

Just a week ago today, eight planes lined up at the Oakland airport, each eager to win the $25,000 prize for first to reach Honolulu in the world's greatest aviation race. Two crashed at the takeoffs, two turned back, owing to minor mishaps, two reached Hawaii and two last were seen passing over the Golden Gate. A third plane, going to their rescue, flashed an SOS as it apparently fell into the sea.

The hunt for Mildred Doran, Angelle Pedlar and Y. K. Kuno, of the "Miss Doran," for Jack Frost and Gordon Scott, of the "Golden Eagle," and for Erwin and Eichwald, of the "Dallas Spirit," son may be changed to a search for bits of plane wreckage.

16 MORE SHIPS JOIN NAVY'S SEARCH
WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The navy search of the Pacific for the seven missing Hawaiian flyers was augmented today by 16 more ships—two cruisers, Omaha and 15 destroyers.

The intensive search of the Pacific lanes will be continued until darkness Thursday, at which time, if no traces have been found of Miss Mildred Doran and the six aviators lost in three planes, all vessels will be ordered to return to the hunt.

The 16 ships engaged in battle fleet maneuvers between Puget Sound and San Francisco, left the fleet yesterday and will arrive shortly after noon Wednesday at a point about 555 miles out of San Francisco.

Permit For New Bank At Inyo Granted

(By United Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Permission to organize the Owens Valley bank, in Bishop, Calif., and supply banking facilities for residents of Inyo county who have had to do without banks for nearly three weeks, was granted by Will C. Wood, state superintendent of banks, today.

The persons to whom the permit was granted are Charles A. Partridge, Thomas Williams, W. A. Cashbaugh, George B. Warren, George W. Naylor and George Watterson.

The application for permission to organize the bank has been in Wood's office for six months, he said, but until failure of the Inyo County bank there was no necessity for a new bank in the field.

SCHOOL BOARD MOVES TO SELL WILLARD SITE

Overtures Made to Council For Bid on North Main Street Property

Viewed as a preliminary move toward the disposal of the Frances E. Willard junior high school property for a new junior high school site in the north section of the city were overtures made by the board of education to the city council for a bid on the property, it was learned today in Santa Ana business circles.

The action of the school trustees, inquiries revealed, is in accordance with recommendations adopted by the former board of education, suggesting that the new board take up the matter of erecting a new junior high school plant in the north section of the city.

The question of selling the school property to the city, to be used as a civic center, including a municipal auditorium, has been discussed from time to time by the school trustees. The proposal, it was learned, has met with general approval throughout the city, particularly among business men catering to travel patronage.

No definite action was taken by the school trustees until a few days ago, when the matter was taken up with the city council. While no information has been given out by the board members or the city officials, it is understood that conferences, held between the two bodies, have dealt principally with the financial side of the proposed deal. Some doubt has been expressed as to whether the voters of the city would be willing to vote a big bond issue for the purchase of the school property by the city and then turn around and vote another bond issue for the construction of a new junior high school plant. In this connection, it was rumored, there have been suggestions of exchange of properties, the nature of which could not be ascertained.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Swan Singh, claiming to be a prince of a royal house of Kashmir, India, and a friend of Harry Singh, Indian maharajah of mysterious "Mr. A" fame, was taken into custody here today on a bad check charge.

Singh, it was understood at the time of his arrival here, under the patronage of Mrs. Elizabeth C. E. Miller, heiress to the millions of the late Washington Tyler, of Cleveland, O.

Entire World Hears Echoes Of Executions

(By United Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Ninety-nine men and 28 women sympathizers of Sacco and Vanzetti were in jail here today, following their arrest last night in a clever police coup.

The group was marching to a protest meeting, carrying banners and singing "The Internationale," when the police diverted the head of the column into the patrol wagon entrance of the hall of justice.

Before the radicals knew where they were half of them were under arrest.

They were held on charges of unlawful assemblage, unlawful parading, carrying banners without licenses and obstructing traffic.

ONE ARRESTED AFTER CHURCH BOMBING

CLEVELAND, Aug. 23.—One man was held for investigation today in connection with the bombing last night, which caused $10,000 damage to the Franciscan monastery of St. Joseph's church.

The man, believed by police to have been in sympathy with Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, was arrested while loitering in the neighborhood of the church. He protested innocence.

COMMUNISTS WOULD BLOCK LEGION CONVENTION

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Communists planned today an attempt to prevent the American Legion from meeting here next month.

The scheme was intended as a protest against the execution, last night, of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Boycott of all things American formed the basis of the plan. It was not likely that the Communists could succeed in frustrating the convention.

LONG BATTLE IS ENDED IN DEATH HOUSE

(By United Press)
BOSTON, Aug. 23.—The Sacco-Vanzetti case, which dragged through the Massachusetts courts for seven years, ended dramatically in the electric chair early today in just 24 minutes.

Stoically and with a flash of defiance, Nicola Sacco, the shoemaker, and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the fish peddler, went to their deaths protesting their innocence.

Celestino Madeiros, the youthful Portuguese, who had "confessed" to the crimes of which they were convicted, went with them. He, too, died a stoic.

A gray old prison that resembled an ancient fortress was the scene of this closing chapter of the case that started as the conventional murder of a paymaster and his guard and ultimately became a world issue.

Up to the hour of doom, weary attorneys, who had battled relentlessly that the lives of the condemned anarchists might be prolonged, held the faintest glimmer of hope of staying the hand of death.

Once before, only 12 days since—these same lives had been spared by a midnight reprieve. But last midnight brought no respite and in the minutes that followed Sacco and Vanzetti paid with their lives for their alleged killing of Frederick Parmenter and Alexander Berardelli, during a payroll holdup on April 15, 1920. The triple execution was intensely dramatic, yet, medical, careful and not without dignity.

The three men were ready for death and met it without show of fear.

Madeiros, who played only a minor role in the drama, was stoic and resigned to the inevitable. At 12:02 a. m., he entered the death chamber. He walked to the chair, leaped two guards, and sat down to die. At nine minutes and 35 seconds past midnight the doctors announced he was dead.

Nicola Sacco was brought in next, at 12:11 a. m. A man of 36 years, he seemed younger as he walked with pale face, but set lines, and steady gait to the chair. Just before he died he voiced his unalterable convictions.

"Long Live Anarchy," he cried in Italian.

He was sitting in the death chair. Guards adjusted straps and the electrodes.

"Farewell, my wife and child and all my friends," he said audibly. This time in broken English, the executioner, threw his switch from behind a screen, Sacco spoke his last words:

"Farewell, mother."
A deathly silence then prevailed in the room. A dozen men were there, but the only sound was the subdued shuffling of the two men who carried what had been Nicola Sacco to a marble slab behind a protecting screen. He was pronounced dead at 12:19 a. m.

Vanzetti was brought in at 12:20 a. m., with his mild, reproachful brown eyes and drooping mustache, he radiated even at the hour of death the restless energy which made him, an Italian immigrant and fish peddler, an intellectual leader in his circle.

He was three years older than Sacco.

Vanzetti was more dramatic. The attendants seemed more to be accompanying than leading him.

He stooped to shake hands with his guards.

Then he sat in the death seat without a tremor and said:

"I wish to tell you I am innocent and never committed any crime, but sometimes some sin."

"I thank you for everything you have done."

"I am innocent of all crimes, not only of this one, but all."

"I am innocent!"

"I wish to forgive some people for what they are now doing to me."

The earnest, broken English was followed by a brief, profound silence.

Then the warden's arm raised in the signal to the electrician.

Vanzetti was pronounced dead at 12:24 a. m.

The triple execution was over before the day was half an hour old. The hundreds of police and troops, who, with their bayonets, pistols and fire hose had guarded the prison against an interruption in the business of execution, began to disperse.

DEATH BRINGS END TO FAMOUS MURDER CASE

young Pittsburgh attorney, who had directed the dramatic fight of the last two weeks to save Sacco and Vanzetti, came from the warden's office. He had sat there for a dreadful half hour bowing his head and weeping like a child when the matter of fact voice of the announcer told newspapermen of the executions within the death chamber.

Soon after 1 a. m., the bodies were brought out and placed in an ambulance.

Under heavy escort, the ambulance moved to the city morgue, where an autopsy had to be performed before relatives could claim the bodies.

Warden Hendry, heavy set Scotchman, was pale as he sat in the corridor before his office and told a United Press reporter what he had seen.

"Vanzetti shook hands with me before he went," he said. "He has a strong grip—as strong as mine."

"Everything went well—it went a little quicker than the executions of the car barn bandits last winter, you know," the warden continued. "Yes, I think it went better than the car barn executions—certainly as good."

"The men were not excited. Sacco appeared a little excited—but that was his natural manner."

"Madeira didn't say anything. Vanzetti made a speech. But all were quiet when the current was turned on. Vanzetti had finished what he wanted to say before the time came."

"None of the witnesses seemed upset in any way."

"Mr. Musmano made a personal appeal to me to delay the executions. I couldn't do that—I didn't have the right to do that. It wasn't for me to decide."

The warden rose and turned toward the door connecting with his own home, itself a part of the rambling prison structure.

"Guess I've got to get a bite to eat," he said.

Wattersons Lose Their Attorneys

BISHOP, Calif., Aug. 23.—On the eve of their arraignment on 44 counts of embezzlement, W. W. and Mark Q. Watterson, Inyo county bankers, announced here today that their attorneys, who had represented them since their arrest had withdrawn from the case.

No reason was given for the withdrawal of the attorneys, F. C. Braucht and E. G. Preston, and their successors have not been named.

The Watterson brothers will be arraigned in superior court at Independence tomorrow to plead on charges which followed the collapse of their five Inyo county banks and the disclosure that $880,000 of the banks' funds were missing in addition to $421,000 from the Owens valley irrigation district.

OSMOND M. ROBBINS DIES AT HIS HOME MONDAY AFTER AN ILLNESS OF OVER TWO YEARS

Closing a long life of usefulness and leadership in many affairs and activities, death came yesterday afternoon to Osmond M. Robbins, secretary-manager of the Home Mutual Building and Loan association. The end came at the Robbins residence, 930 Lacy street, culminating a two-year illness. The passing of Mr. Robbins marks the close of one of Santa Ana's best known and best loved citizens, one whose influence has been felt in myriads of avenues in the intricate movement of the community's life in the third of a century that Santa Ana has been his home.

Mr. Robbins was born in Rockland, Me., September 30, 1856. After learning the stone cutter's trade in Maine, as a young man he went to Kasota, Minn., and later to St. Cloud, Minn., as manager for a large stone contracting and quarry concern. From Minnesota, he went to Sioux City, Ia., where he and his brother, for a period of five years, were engaged in the stone contracting business.

In the middle '90s, a number of Santa Anans organized the Arizona Sandstone company, with quarries at Flagstaff, Ariz. Red stone from those quarries was used in building the Orange county courthouse and in number of buildings in Los Angeles. It was as manager of the Arizona Sandstone company that Mr. Robbins came to Santa Ana with his wife and three children in 1896, and he remained with that company until 1900, at which time his endeavors were turned into new channels, for in that year he entered the real estate and insurance business in partnership with H. Fairbanks. Later the firm was merged into the Orange County Realty company, which firm included as partners O. M. Robbins, H. Fairbanks, George H. Randall, C. H. Morse and A. J. Visel.

Son in Firm

When Mac O. Robbins, son of O. M., was ready to go into business the firm of O. M. Robbins & Son, insurance, was organized. That firm, organized in 1909, is the well known insurance firm of that name today, the membership remaining unchanged.

In that same year, 1909, O. M. Robbins was selected secretary-manager of the Home Mutual Building and Loan association, which under his capable leadership has attained a recognized place in the nation, among building and loan associations, as a model of its type, emphasizing the mutual aspects of the business. From far and wide, building and loan men have come here to examine the institution and learn details of the methods followed by it. Since 1909 the assets of the association have increased to 10 times what they were when Mr. Robbins took charge, the assets at this time totaling $2,225,000.

Aside from his activity in business, Mr. Robbins attained equal prominence in other activities. He has long been known as one of the leading Masons of the Southland. He was a past master of the blue lodge, No. 241, and was a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason. He served for many years as secretary of the Masonic Temple association, which built the Masonic temple at Fifth and Sycamore, and secretary of the Masonic Cemetery association.

On School Board

He served as a member and secretary of the Santa Ana board of education during the period the Frances E. Willard school building on North Main was built as a high school, in 1900. For a time, also, he was a member of the public library board.

He was an organizer and was the first president of the Sunset club. For many years he was a member of the Monday club, in which club he took a vigorous part in the discussions of questions of the day. Soon after the Santa Ana Rotary club was organized, O. M. Robbins came a member, his son, Mac O. Robbins, being the first president of that organization. In this club Mr. Robbins has always been affectionately known and loved as "Dad" Robbins.

Forty-three years ago, Mr. Robbins was married in Denver, Colo., to Bessie H. Von Benschoten. Mrs. Robbins, two daughters, Miss Doris Robbins of Santa Ana and Mrs. Edward Cheverton of San Marino, one son, Mac O. Robbins of Santa Ana, and a sister, Mrs. Cora E. Harwood of Portland, Me., survive him.

The funeral is to be held at Smith and Tutill's parlors at 10 o'clock Thursday morning with the Rev. William E. Roberts of Los Angeles and the Masons in charge. Cremation is to occur at Forest Lawn cemetery.

Few men in Santa Ana were better known than Mr. Robbins. He was a man of unquestioned integity and sound judgment. In all of the affairs of his life, in his home, in business and in lodge and club rooms, he was a man who was loved and admired.

AUGGIE PEDLAR TAUGHT FLYING IN SANTA ANA

Auggie Pedlar, who was the pilot of the "Miss Doran," missing contestant in the Dole air marathon to Honolulu, was the instructor at the Floyd Kelso flying field a mile and a half west of Garden Grove three years ago when the field was attracting a large number of visitors, it was learned today.
Pedlar taught Kelso to fly, it was stated. Many Orange County residents were passengers with Pedlar during the time he spent at the field. After leaving Kelso field, Pedlar went to Long Beach where he worked with Earl Daugherty as a wing walker. It was pointed out that many know Pedlar through his associations with the Orange county field and his later work in Long Beach, but do not recall him by name.

GUARDS ON DUTY AT SANTA FE OIL FIELD

Guards were on duty at Santa Fe Springs today following reports that the famous oil field was to be destroyed by radicals. Deputy sheriffs of Los Angeles county and men employed by the major operating companies were on the alert for suspicious characters.
Information that Santa Fe Springs was doomed for destruction was secured when a detective attended a meeting of radicals held in Huntington Beach last week, according to reports.
That oil companies fear a series of bombings in Orange county was indicated today, when the Union Oil company issued instruction to its employees to be on the lookout for persons who might intend to plant bombs on the company's property.
According to reports of the Huntington Beach meeting, the radicals planned to start a bombing campaign on a big scale if Sacco and Vanzetti were executed.

Eleven persons, charged with being drunk were fined or given jail sentences in police court yesterday. They were arrested over the week-end by city officers who "took in" more "drunks" than on any week-end during the year. Rafael Beger was fined $25. Carrillo, $100 or 50 days in jail each, each taking the jail term; Bud Kerns, 60 days, the charge being a third one; Albert Miller, $25, and Lyle Blencoe, $25.
Police were today asked to search for Chancy Arnold, 12-year-old son of Mrs. Dorothy Arnold, 1118 West Pine street, missing from his home since yesterday. The boy is said to have ridden away from home at 8 o'clock yesterday morning on his new bicycle. He has not returned, officers were told.

Paul LeRoy Scholts, 18, and Marion Van Matre, 21, arrested by Officers Carter and Howard on the San Diego highway, Saturday night, when they could account for the ownership of an automobile in which they were riding, were returned to San Diego last night to face charges of automobile theft, the sheriff's office announced today.
Charged with battery, Melgroides Tolentino, 39, who resides near McPherson, was brought to the county jail today by Constable George Bartley, Orange. Tolentino is accused of having beaten his wife with a rope, officers said. He has not been arraigned.

Mrs. Wittmer's body, clad only in a pair of black silk pajamas, was found floating in Newport Bay early yesterday morning. The body was positively identified by C. A. Wittmer, 'San Diego, her father-in-law, late yesterday, at the Winbiger Mission funeral home, after Mr. and Mrs. Louis L. Garrigues, 100 Bay Front avenue, Balboa had partially identified the body.
Although the details of Mrs. Wittmer's last few minutes alive probably never will be known, it is thought by relatives and friends that she was drowned while walking in her sleep. The woman was known to be a somnambulist. She had walked in her sleep before, friends said, and on one occasion woke up to find herself drinking a glass of water.
Death was due to drowning. This was the verdict of Dr. A. L. Thompson, of the Orange county hospital, who conducted an autopsy at 3 o'clock yesterday. There was water in the lungs, the doctor said.
This, coupled with the fact that Mrs. Wittmer had everything to live for, that she was happy and expected to be married again in the near future, smothered all suspicion that she had committed suicide. She was divorced and had a 12 year old son, Robert, with whom she lived at Balboa.
Several weeks ago, she went to Canada, where she was born, and returned here with her mother, Mrs. Isabel Burley, who was to make her home with Mrs. Wittmer.

She had a sweetheart, Lester Forrest Phelps, a Los Angeles contractor and builder, and he was at her home Sunday, where he and the family had a happy reunion.

Further evidence that the woman probably walked to her death while asleep was brought out when it was learned that her bed had been slept in Sunday night.
There were no marks on the body that would tell the story of violence. The contents of the stomach were taken by Dr. Thompson, but she said she doubted that an analysis would show anything unusual. A report on the analysis is expected sometime today.

Coroner Charles D. Brown, who took charge of the case, was asked why the woman's body floated if she had been drowned only a short time. He answered by saying that the woman was frail and that her heart may have weakened before the lungs were filled with water.

No inquest will be held, Coroner Brown said. He will simply take affidavits sometime today, he said, and issue a certificate of death. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Mrs. Wittmer had been a resident of California for eight years. She had lived at Balboa for the past four years.

BERT WEST TO LEAD PARADE ARMISTICE DAY

Bert West, district attorney of Orange county and prominent American Legion member, will head the Armistice Day parade at Fullerton November 11, as grand marshal, it was announced today by Hugh Miller, general director of the celebration.
Mounted on a spirited horse and flanked on each side by a mounted guard of honor, West will lead the parade through Fullerton streets.

Plans for the parade and celebration are growing in scope daily, according to Miller, who has established headquarters at 312 North Spadra road, in the C. S. Chapman garage building. Float entries are being received daily and general interest in the program indicates a more extensive moving pageant than has ever before been staged by Orange county communities co-operating on Armistice day.

Five divisions will be included in the parade under the general headings of patriotic, fraternal, educational, civic and industrial. One special feature of the parade on which the director is now working is the mounted division of horsemen. Approximately 40 horses and riders have been signed up to participate in the parade at this time. A goal of from 150 to 200 horses and riders has been set and applications are expected from all parts of Orange county.

SHERIFF FAILS TO MAKE NEW APPOINTMENTS

With three appointments to the sheriff's forces yet to be made, no action was taken today by Sheriff Sam Jernigan in filling the vacancies.

"I am not ready yet to name any more appointees," the sheriff said. "The selection of men I want around me during my administration must be a careful one, and so far, I have reached no decision regarding the other three appointments," he said.

The other appointments include a chief criminal deputy, a head jailer and a deputy sheriff.

Several conferences have been held with Jernigan and candidates for the positions, he said today, but none of them has caused the sheriff to make up his mind regarding them.

A conference was held today with a man said to be fitted for the head jailer position. It lasted for half an hour, but Jernigan said at its close that no decision had been made.

In the meantime, the short force is hard at work, with the two new appointees already at their duties.

Hunter Leach, appointed deputy jailer, has been working for several days and F. L. Humiston, appointed bailiff yesterday morning, started his duties yesterday afternoon.

Beautiful Wedding Is Held in Hankey Home San Juan Canyon

The ranch home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hankey in San Juan canyon was charming setting last night for the wedding of Mr. Hankey's sister, Miss Helen Hankey, and John Bridenbaugh of Upland.

Scores of Santa Ana friends motored down for the event, joining other guests from San Juan Capistrano, Claremont, Upland and Ontario, where Miss Hankey has been assistant director of physical education in Chaffee union high school. They were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Hankey and the latter's sister, Miss Elise Armitage of Sunset Beach.

Nuptial Music

Preceding the nuptials was a musical program opening with a violin solo, "Salut d'Amour" by Elgar, played by Miss Crozier. Raymond Moreman sang "San Souci's When Song Is Sweet" and Miss Crozier again played, choosing "Midnight Bell" by Hansberger-Kreiser. "Because" by Guy D'Hardelot, was sung by Mrs. Blackwell Smith, and then to the strains of Lohengrin the bridal party appeared, led by two charming bridesmaids, Miss Edith Bridenbaugh, sister of the groom, and Miss Mabel Cooper of Upland. One was gown in rose chiffon, carrying orchid sweet peas, the other in pale green chiffon, with pink sweet peas.

The dainty flower girl was little Mary Elise Hankey, niece of the bride, who wore a picturesque little frock of pale blue organdy, and carried a pretty basket filled with rose petals.

Entry of Bride

Miss Hankey, entering on the arm of her brother, was a very lovely bride in her gown of soft chiffon satin, over which draped the folds of a long tulle veil falling from wreathed orange blossoms. Her formal bouquet of bride roses was showered with snowy sweet peas.

Mr. Bridenbaugh was attended by his brother, Ernest Bridenbaugh, and the impressive marriage service was conducted by Dr. R. C. Stone, pastor of one of the Upland churches. As the young people took their vows, Mr. Moreman softly played "The Swan" by Saint-Saens, and at the conclusion of the ceremony, swung into the joyful measures of Mendelssohn's wedding march, while friends crowded close to offer their congratulatory wishes to the newly wedded pair.

Refreshments were served informally, with one lovely table reserved for the bridal party. It was laden with pink and orchid sweet peas, and the silver and crystal glittered in the soft light of pink tapers, each wearing a festive tulle bow.

Interesting Guests

Among the interesting guests called to San Juan Capistrano by the wedding were M. E. Hill, principal of Chaffee union high school, with Mrs. Hill and their family; Mrs. G. J. Fleming, head of the hygiene department; Miss Ora Mabon, head of the physical education department; Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Stone, and many of the bride's former pupils, including her tennis team. From Sunset Beach, was Mrs. J. A. Armittage.

Late in the evening, Mr. Bridenbaugh and his bride evaded their friends and left by automobile for a two weeks' honeymoon "somewhere in California." They will return for a brief visit with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hankey and then leave for Nebraska where Mr. Bridenbaugh has extensive ranch interests and where they will remain until November. Then their friends are anticipating their return to the Southland where other ranch interests will demand Mr. Bridenbaugh's attention.

His bride is a graduate of Santa Ana high school, later entering Pomona college where she graduated with the same high scholastic standards that had obtained in her high school work.

Guests Are Incentive For Gay Parties

At the home of C. L. Barkdull and his mother, Mrs. Nancy E. Barkdull, of 1240 South Rose street, the happiness and festivity that attend a visit from relatives who come from afar reign supreme, for they are enjoying a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Donald Muir and their son, W. G. Muir, of Anthony, Kansas. Mrs. Muir is a daughter of Mrs. Barkdull.

The family is having many pleasant trips together, among them was one taken yesterday to Lake Arrowhead, Big Bear and Victorville, both mountains and desert. They came through the desert at the glorious hour of sunset.

A family reunion and celebration of the birthday anniversary of C. L. Barkdull, was held Sunday, the relatives from out of town remaining over night at the Barkdull home, where a birthday breakfast for supper and presents distributed. Later in the day they went to Laguna Beach, where at Las Ondas, the dinner, with the candle-light cake of beloved tradition, was served.

In addition to Mr. Barkdull and his mother, those present were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Muir, W. G. Muir, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Marshall of Rancho Santa Fe, and Miss Gertrude Taylor of Los Angeles, a niece of Mr. Barkdull.

CLEANING FOWLS

In cleaning chicken, or any other fowl, rub the inside thoroughly with a half lemon before stuffing it with dressing.

OPEN SANDWICHES

Vegetable or meat salad will go farther for supper if served on open sandwiches of bread or toast laid on a lettuce leaf.

Scanning the social order today and realizing what importance children occupy in the thoughts of educators, one conclusion crystallizes:

This certainly is the Age of Youth.

Children's theaters, children's art exhibits, children's scientific playgrounds! And of course, children's clothing have an important place in the realm of style.

Catering Fashion

For Fashion, usually in the vanguard of the trend of the times, now caters solicitously to the young of America.

"Sonny" is considered a distinct personality, apart from his parents. Suits, caps, sweaters and accessories are fashioned for his perspicacious taste.

The day when father's pants could make a smart new suit for Johnny are gone forever. Johnny now goes with Father and Mother and chooses his own.

English Note

Paris dictates fashions for women. But the correctly informal note of English sports wear sounds style again and again in the clothing for "Sonny." For the boy over six the smartest and most sensible wear allows three choices: the sack suit with two buttons and correctly-cut full "shorts"; the single-breasted three-button lounge suit of soft materials, preferably English tweeds; and separate shorts or knickerbockers with pull-over sweater, worn either over a shirt with sports collar or without a shirt, worn over the undershirt.

The fad for dressing "Sonny" like a caricature in long trousers, has passed happily.

His clothes, designed for him now, give the insouciant air youth should have and a simplicity that should go with little age.

The Materials

Materials for the boys' suits are homespun, kasha, serge and wash of the usual suitings and wash flannels which prove vetted satisfactory. Blues are good this season, gray flannel and browns from tan to deep hue are favorites, especially if they are blest with a novelty stripe, fleck, or invisible pattern.

Camp suits are fashioned of English drill material, khaki and Jersey, preferably the two former. Sweaters and long golf hose are the smart accessories for play wear.

Sweaters

Sweaters range from angoras of light but strong colors to heavy woollens in sporty geometrical figures and stripes. The sweater necks vary, too. But the "quarter turtle neck" on a pull-over type sweater is best.

The flannel sack suit calls for an Etan cap or a soft panama hat for summer wear. Sailor's berets are good for boys up to 12. Caps, American make, should match the suit in material and be restrained in size. The young boy's clothing should all show absence of exaggeration.

"Shorts" show a tendency to crowd knickers out of popularity. The baggy plus-fours still are preferred by some. With a suit of either shorts or knickers, sack coat or three button, the shirts have collars that end in points or fall away from the neck like tennis shirts. Ties come in figures, stripes, and broken designs, in colors that run the gamut of shades of the spectrum—and then some. It would seem as if ties with matching handkerchiefs allow a vent for "Sonny's" streak for flashiness.

Topcoats

Top-coats are of chevrot, tweed or camel's hair in light colors. Tans and grays are always good. A coat with raglan sleeves and cut on full roomy lines is correct and comfortable. The English reefer is worn by boys up to nine years, with an English tan of chevrot to match.

Shoes have dozens of designs in one or two kinds of leather.

Brogues, of course, are always smart on "Sonny." Black shows signs of being the choice of a large number of young men this season. But tans, with variety saddles of alligator and other contrasting leather, are shown too.

Other Accessories

Gloves, handkerchiefs and shirts all should have some kinship with the rest of the costume. For the well-dressed very young man makes as complete a picture when all assembled nowadays as his Mama in her costume. Versatility is the keynote—blending colors and like materials that create general harmony.

W. F. M. S. Presidents Of Orange County Entertained

A group of presidents of Woman's Foreign Missionary societies of Santa Ana Methodist churches, served as hostesses at a delightful luncheon and county presidents' council held late last week at the home of Mrs. Horton Palmer, on South Sycamore street.

Mrs. Palmer is president of the San Diego district and assisting her in entertaining were Mrs. E. G. Warner, head of Richland avenue W. F. M. S., Dr. Evalene Peo and Miss Gertrude Richardson, presidents of the W. F. M. S. and the Doris Welles auxiliary, respectively, of the First M. E. church.

Guests were the presidents of all the Methodist auxiliaries in Orange county.

The luncheon hour was an especially enjoyable one. Tables were beautiful with linens in Montmellic embroidery centered with baskets of vivid zinnias and red dahlias which were flanked with vari-tinted candles in silver candlesticks. Miss Justina Palmer, daughter of the home, and her friend, Miss Rowena Newcomb, served the menu whose second course proffered a delightful surprise.

This was a huge birthday cake, and it revealed the fact that the day chosen for the gathering was the eighty-third birthday of Mrs. E. D. McLeod, president emerita of the First M. E. Foreign Missionary society, who had served that organization as president, for a period of twelve years.

Afternoon hours were devoted to reports of the work accomplished by the missionary societies of the county, and to discussions of plans for the closing up of the year's work.

Those who were present in addition to the hostess group, Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Warner, Dr. Peo and Miss Richardson, and the honored guest, Mrs. McLeod, were Mrs. Perry Mathis of Anaheim, Mrs. R. L. Chambers of Fullerton, Mrs. Fitz of Garden Grove, Mrs. S. C. Hearn of Huntington Beach, Mrs. Charles Hotchkiss of Orange, and Mrs. H. A. Randall of La Habra.

Household Hints

MINT SAUCE

Emergency mint sauce will get the proper flavor if you mix small leaves only with sugar and rub with a spoon hastily before adding vinegar.

VEGETABLE BOUILLON

The juice in which many green vegetables have been cooked makes a tasty bouillon if seasoned carefully with butter and served piping hot.

KEROSENE RAG

If you rub off your freshly washed auto with a rag sprinkled with kerosene, you will find it dries and shines much more easily.

SPARKLING WINDOWS

The chemically treated cloths, used for shining silver, work magic when used to shine windows and mirrors. They make them sparkle.

PAINTED DRAWERS

If you paint the inside of the dresser drawers that your children use, you will find they take more pride in keeping them neat and in order.

PARACHUTE JUMP FURNISHES REAL 'KICK'

Navy's Star 'Death Cheater' Tells About 'Thrill of Thrills'

(EDITOR'S NOTE)—Here's a thrill series about a series of thrills! By Alva Starr, parachute jumping star of the U. S. navy and head of "The Death Cheaters" parachute school at the Lakehurst naval air station. Three stirring, breath-taking articles about death faced and defeated from dizzy heights.

BY ALVA F. STARR,
Chief Petty Officer, U. S. N.

A ship goes roaring by high overhead at an altitude, say, of 5000 feet.

Suddenly, the steady drone of the motor stops. It sputters, coughs, goes dead.

Then a burst of flame! A black speck climbs out of the cockpit, hesitates on the edge and drops earthward like a stone. It falls sickeningly for what seems an eternity of seconds and—plop, a white canopy of silk opens gracefully and a quiet descent is made to mother terra firma.

Another life has been saved. Another pilot has experienced the thrill of "The Death Cheaters," a name applied by some to my class of young airmen at the Lakehurst, N. J., naval air station, who are talked to has an erroneous idea emergency drops from the clouds.

Almost every layman I have talked to has an erroneous idea of what parachute-jumping is all about.

"Oh, I'll bet it's the greatest thrill in the world!"

"You must be crazy to do it!"

"Only a man of iron nerves would do such a thing, etc."

And so the comments vary.

I have taken jumps from ships at all altitudes, at all speeds, from 40 to 140 miles an hour. I have hopped off the Shenandoah, Los Angeles, non-right airships, free balloons and practically all types of aircraft. I have guided more than 100 students in my classes through to graduation "exercises" in the sky and I still maintain that the man WITH fear is a better jumper and a better airman than the man WITHOUT fear.

The "daredevil," he who honestly has no fear in his heart, is a poor airman. He takes too many chances and is inclined to be careless whereas the intelligent and fearful man will scientifically go about his business in a methodical and wise manner. Consequently, his chances of succeeding are much better than the reckless one's.

That much for that.

How does it feel to jump off a speeding airplane? What do you think about as you fall, when you tug at the rip-cord and your chute fails to open? Do you dive head-first or feet-first? Is it much of a shock? Is it much of a thrill?

These are the questions hurled at me oftentimes when I alight.

I believe that to the average man there is no emotional "kick" big enough to compare with that experienced by the first jump from the wing tip of a swift ship thousands of feet in the air.

The dizzy fall, the roar of the wind slipping by your face, the hysterical suspense as you jerk the rip-cord, the "freezing" of muscles and heart action as you wait for the pilot "chute to anchor" and the deep wave of relief as the huge circle of silk "strings out" and all is well—no man can forget that!

There is no describing the sensations to a new recruit.

I have seen the most hideous expressions come over their faces as they let go and fell to what they believed would be certain death. A man sitting in the electric chair could not look more indescribably frightened or agonized.

Some men stare at the earth in fascination, as a bird charmed by a snake. Some grit their teeth and

"The dizzy fall, the roar of the wind slipping by your face, the hysterical suspense as you jerk the rip-cord, the 'freezing' of muscles and heart action as you wait for the pilot 'chute to anchor' ***** no man can forget that!" says Alva Starr (inset).

JURY DECIDES MURPHY DEATH IS ACCIDENTAL

A coroner's jury, yesterday afternoon, returned a verdict of accidental death in the case of Richard Murphy, 53, Los Angeles carpenter, killed Sunday night when he was run down by an automobile driven by B. W. Tye, 3613 Park boulevard, San Diego. The inquest was held at the Smith and Tutthill funeral parlors.

The jury exonerated Tye from all blame in the accident when it was shown that Murphy was struck when he darted out in front of the Tye machine from the side of the road. The accident occurred on the San Diego highway, near the Newport Beach road intersection.

Tye, arrested soon after the accident, when officers found a gallon jug partly filled with whiskey in his car, pleaded guilty to possession in Justice Kenneth Morrison's court yesterday afternoon, following the inquest, and was given a $50 fine, which he paid.

Tye asserted that he and his wife had been to Catalina Island and were returning to their home in the southern city. He said that he had not had a drink during the day and that the whiskey was placed in the car the night before the accident by friends at San Pedro.

F. W. Melville, 2348 Beswick street, Los Angeles, who was accompanying Murphy to Los Angeles and who was arrested on a reckless driving charge, following the accident, appeared in Justice Kenneth Morrison's court yesterday afternoon and entered a plea of not guilty. He was released on his own recognizance and examining trial set for Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

Melville said that he was not in his machine at the time Murphy was killed but was in Cole's service station at the intersection, several feet away.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed. The body will probably be taken to Los Angeles today for burial, it was said. Murphy was not married. He was a native of Ireland and had been in this country for 20 years.

literally hurl themselves off. Others, with a despairing glance at companions in the fuselage, simply roll off.

All have to conquer a form of hysteria that makes them often forget 10 to 12 weeks of ground instruction.

I shall never forget the biggest kick I ever got out of life. It was my first jump, part of my graduation performance, at Chanute field, in Illinois!

In his next article, the veteran of unnumbered jumps describes the sensations of his first.

PREPARE PLANS FOR ARMISTICE DAY IN COUNTY

Either a presidential cabinet officer or the governor of the state of California will be guest of honor of Orange county on Armistice day in Fullerton, if plans of the celebration committee, revealed today by Hugh Miller, director in charge, are carried to completion successfully.

At a meeting of the general executive committee at noon today at McFarland's cafe, in Fullerton, plans for the securing of some high official to act as guest of honor was laid, and a strenuous campaign started.

Fullerton is aiming high in its standards for the Armistice day parade and celebration, and the move to secure the noted guest in line with the activities planned for the day.

No intimation as to which member of the cabinet would be extended an invitation was given out by the committee pending some return to inquiries sent out. However, it was stated that in event they were unable to secure a cabinet member or the governor, some person of equal prominence nationally would be extended the honor. Definite announcement of the identity of the guest of honor is expected to be made within the next two or three days.

THIS WOMAN FOUND RELIEF

After Long Suffering by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a little town of the Middle West, was a discouraged woman. For four months she had been in such poor health that she could not stoop to put on her own shoes. Unable to do her work, unable to go out of doors or enjoy a friendly chat with her neighbors, life seemed dark indeed to Mrs. Daugherty.

"I began taking the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Daugherty writes, "and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to everyone I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ed. DAUGHERTY, 1203 Orchard Ave., Muscatine, Iowa.

Daugherty. Then one day, a booklet was left at her front door. Idly she turned the pages. Soon she was reading with quickened interest. The little booklet was filled with letters from women in conditions similar to hers who had found better health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

KIWANIS CLUB OF SANTA ANA AT FULLERTON

More than 40 members of the Santa Ana Kiwanis club were present at yesterday's meeting of the Fullerton Kiwanis club at McFarland's cafe when a program of humor and speeches was presented by the Santa Ana delegation.

With Orlyn Robertson, president of the Santa Ana Kiwanis club, presiding, several short talks were given. Robert Speed offered a brief series of anecdotes pertaining to certain members present at the meeting. Robertson stated that the meeting was in line with the inter-club relations program of the organization.

Colonel M. B. Wellington gave the principal address of the day, emphasizing the value of friendship and the value of Kiwanis. His address was based on the message of Franklin Kean, noted Kiwanis organizer, to clubs throughout the world.

The Fullerton Kiwanis club went on record as endorsing the plans of the Fullerton post of the American Legion for staging the Armistice day parade and program in Fullerton this November. A committee was named including J. G. Harris, Phil Haber and H. V. Williams to represent the Kiwanis club in co-operating with the American Legion.

Jack Siddall, president of the newly formed Buena Park Kiwanis club, invited Fullerton Kiwanians to attend the Friday evening session to be held by his club September 2, at which the Santa Ana Kiwanians will present the program.

Announcement was made that the Fullerton Lions club members will be guests of the Fullerton Kiwanis club at the regular meeting on next Monday. The occasion will be the report of the Rev. Graham C. Hunter on his trip to various European centers and his attendance at the Kiwanis convention in Montreal.

Secretary Dan O'Hanlon read a letter from the chamber of commerce, lauding the club for its interest in Hillcrest park and the program which it presented there Monday evening for the purpose of bringing the park to the attention of citizens of Fullerton.

UNITED STATES TIRES ARE GOOD TIRES

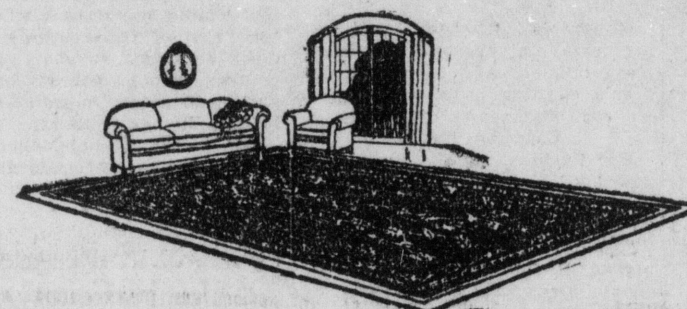

Question: What difference does it make to me that the United States Rubber Company grows and controls its own supply of rubber?
Answer: It makes a lot of difference to you. Good tires must start with plenty of the right kind of rubber. The right kind of rubber starts with the right kind of rubber trees. Among other methods for producing plenty of superior rubber latex, bud-grafting—to make better trees—has been practiced on the United States Rubber plantations for ten years. If you ride on U. S. Royals you get the benefit. If you do not ride on U. S. Royals you are missing something extra good. Either way, it makes a lot of difference to you.

CANVASSING OF HOME TO HOME TYPE IS HARD; EXPERT AVERS

Salesman Must Be Jack of All Trades Ready to Help Women at Chores

IT TAKES NERVE TO RING DOORBELL

Fear Is Greatest Obstacle To Overcome — However Game Is Interesting

Regardless of the family wash that is delayed in getting onto the line, this house to house canvassing job is just as hard on the salesman as it is on the housewife, Santa Ana button pushers agreed today.

In fact they declare that the hardest job in the world is to step up to a house, ring the bell, and then face what opens the door. Some of the canvassers try to get ready for the shock by attempting to deduce from the surroundings the probable appearance of the woman they are to meet.

But this scheme seldom eases the situation and the bell ringers never know whether to get ready to run or be prepared to accept an invitation to afternoon tea.

Despite the popular superstition that all house to house men are hard boiled, fear is the greatest obstacle they have to overcome. Many a salesman recalls how his voice failed him and his throat became dry on his initial day in the field. He never forgets the heavy tread that resounded through the house and his total lack of language as his intended victim glared at him through a crack in the door.

As a matter of fact, the housewife never realizes the courage it took to ring that doorbell in the first place. She cannot realize the care with which the green man eventually has selected her house for his first shaky attack. Many a salesman has walked past rows and rows of houses before pushing the first bell. Some homes, he argues to himself, are too close together. The housewives will see him coming or hear his uncertain voice from the next door. Others, he decides for some unknown reason, are too far apart and still others look too formidable.

Eventually he decides that the doorbells were put there for outsiders to use and not for the family inside. He has a legitimate proposition to offer and decides to gain a hearing. But the longest minutes of the days are those between the ringing of the bell and the opening of the door. As Mark Twain did in the Sunday school episode of Tom Sawyer, the kindest thing to do is to draw the curtain of charity over the scene.

AFTER SINKING OF FAVORITE

Life guards, aided by Johnny Weismuller (arrow), famous swimmer, are shown helping to recover bodies from the excursion boat Favorite which sank in Lake Michigan near Lincoln park, Chicago. Twenty-six bodies were brought out of the boat after the disaster, but Eugene E. McDonald Jr. (inset), wealthy radio manufacturer and a member of the Byrd-MacMillan Arctic expedition, reported there seemed a score of bodies still in the craft before she was raised. McDonald went down in a diving suit to explore the boat.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF SIX COUNTIES INVITED TO ATTEND FAIR OPENING DAY

The boards of supervisors of six Southern California counties today were among the official groups invited jointly by the Orange county fair association, to be guests of the fair on the opening day of the exposition, Monday, Sept. 5. According to William Schumacher, of Buena Park, chairman of the county supervisors, these counties include Imperial, Ventura, Los Angeles, San Diego, San Bernardino and Riverside.

Orange county officials have planned for their distinguished guests, and all who attend the initial opening will witness a rodeo program in the afternoon, and evening sham battle performance. The first day has been designated American Legion day.

In addition to the wealth of Southland produce, livestock and numerous displays, special entertainment is programmed with concerts, Indian bands and shows listed. Congressman Phil D. Swing is to be the principal speaker at the 6 o'clock banquet.

To supply a part of the afternoon rodeo program, a carload of wild Brahma steers from Sonora, Mexico, is on its way, according to Bob Anderson, of the Baker ranch, manager of the rodeo. Anderson has just completed a round-up of 150 wild horses in Arizona.

Besides the steer riding contests, other events carded for the six-day rodeo include wild horse riding, calf roping, calf riding, bulldogging, relay races, Roman races and a special event, an Orange county speed handicap for horses owned in Orange county.

One of the most daring sham battle demonstrations staged in the west is planned for the first two nights of the fair, sponsored by the American Legion and Spanish War Veterans. The demonstration, which picked men of the Southern California regiment, now in training for the mimic war at Del Monte, will participate, has been planned to favor peace by showing war's destruction, it was said.

Company F, 169th Infantry, Orange county's own, is preparing to take an important part in the engagement. Live ammunition, tracer bullets, howitzers and 37 mm. guns will be thrown into action, shooting a total of 25,000 rounds of ammunition, according to army officers directing the war demonstration.

Further arrangements for the Southern California Scioto's night have been completed, it was announced today by S. W. Miller, of Fullerton, who is directing plans for a gala lodge night, September 9. Scioto Pyramids from Santa Ana, Fullerton, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Long Beach, San Bernardino and San Diego, he announced, were entering uniformed drill teams and bands, in competition for cash prizes and cups.

In addition to the drill and band contest, Miller said several high class comedians from the Fullerton, Santa Ana and Los Angeles lodges are scheduled for special stunts.

SCHOOL HEADS PREPARE FOR OPENING DAY

Repair Work Practically Completed — Strangers Ask for Information

With summer repairs drawing to a close and with the school rushing alterations to have everything ready for the opening day of the new school year, Monday, September 12, the pupils of the Santa Ana city schools and their parents are beginning to turn their minds to the important business of education. Evidence of this fact is the numerous telephone calls at the board of education offices inquiring about registration, enrollment, transfers and other matters connected with the opening of school.

Judging from the number of calls coming from strangers, unacquainted with local conditions, there is reason to believe that the registration figures for the Santa Ana schools on the opening day will show an increase over that of last year.

Commenting upon the subject of public education, J. A. Cranston, city superintendent of schools, called attention to the recent flight of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, which, in the opinion of the Santa Ana school executive is an inspiring example of seeing a task through, and no undertaking, he added, is more important than a good education. Just as Lindy turned his plane east and set out for Paris, so must the student turn his thought toward school and college with the determination "on to school."

"We should employ as much determination, zeal and thoroughness in continuing the great American venture of public education as Lindy did in his flight to the French capital," declared the superintendent. "The happy partnership of Lindy and his plane, which he termed 'we,' finds parallel in our partnership with the schools. That great figure of speech, coined by America's air ace, may well be employed in speaking of the spirit of youth with the spirit of education, just as Lindy joined the spirit of America with the spirit of St. Louis."

Cranston expressed himself well pleased with the co-operation and support given the supervised summer playgrounds, which this summer have shown a big increase in attendance. At first, he said, playgrounds were considered only as breathing space where children of the poorer districts might get fresh air and exercise without subjecting themselves to traffic dangers. The pursuits were entirely physical. Today, the modern playground is going in for other things as well. Music plays an important role and the drama follows close behind. Music and dramatics, including community singing, the school official stated, have brought a more wholesome attitude to the playgrounds, a more friendly atmosphere, and an increased sense of social unity. Creative arts, including woodwork, have added variety to the playground activities.

The ancient Romans would sacrifice a dog each year to Stifus, the dog star, because they believed the star influenced their crops.

MURIEL ISN'T BIT FUSSY OVER FOOD

This egg is about twice the size of Muriel's mouth, but she doesn't care. She'll eat it whole, regardless of the effect it will have on her slender shape. When the egg gets about half way down it'll break anyhow, so why be fussy? Muriel is a pilot snake and harmless.

UNUSUAL PLANT IN S. A. BLOOMS ONLY AT NIGHT

An unusual plant of a species not often cultivated, is the night blooming cereus, owned by Mrs. J. Thiessenhusen, 421 West First street. According to a number of Santa Ana nurserymen, this plant is a remarkable one in its size and the profusion of its blossoms.

Recently Mrs. Thiessenhusen's plant bore 13 waxy white blossoms, all of them being a foot across. The plant itself, which measures six feet across, is about eight years old and was brought here from Wisconsin after a year's growth in that state.

The first year, says Mrs. Thiessenhusen, the night blooming cereus apparently makes no growth, the cutting remaining stationary. The next year it put out a few new angles and it is not until it is well into its third year that it really grows.

There are only a few night blooming cereus in the city, it was said by one nurseryman here, the scarcity being brought about by the fact that they are expensive and are very slow growers. While it is popularly supposed that they burst into full bloom at midnight, the fact is that they respond to the temperature of the air and blossom early or late in the evening as it is accordingly warm or cold.

The night blooming cereus is a member of the cacti family and is a close relative of the cereus giganteus, the desert cacti so common on the Arizona and California deserts. The night blooming varieties are trailers, while the day bloomers are tree-like.

Mrs. Thiessenhusen's plant has been viewed by many persons in the last year as during this period it has put out over a hundred blossoms, a prolific record. At the present time it is covered with many tiny buds.

Historic Desk Is To Be Preserved

FALLON, Nev., Aug. 23.—Mark Twain's historic desk, used by the great humorist while editor of the Virginia Enterprise at Virginia City, 64 years ago, has been shipped to Reno from the office of Thomas Ryer, Fallon automobile dealer. It will be placed in the cabin used by Twain while a prospector.

The desk is of pine, with a flat top, and was hauled over the Sierras in a wagon. It contains some yellowed copies of the Enterprise, and several old bills, made out and left in the drawers by "Sam" Clemens, as Twain was then known.

PRESIDENT OF COUNTRY CLUB LANDS IN JAIL

Dan Gilkey, president of Parkridge Country club, was in the Riverside county jail, Monday, charged with obtaining property under false pretenses.

Gilkey's arrest was subsequent to his announcement last week that he had disposed of the country club to a Los Angeles negro syndicate for $325,000.

J. H. Carlson, of Riverside, a member of the certificate owners of the club, running for a period of 99 years, filed the charges against Gilkey.

It is alleged that Gilkey recently disposed of 104 life membership shares in the club at $500 each for the asserted purpose of clearing a $125,000 indebtedness against the club.

On Saturday night a fiery cross was reported burning on the hills adjacent to Parkridge Country club. Parties who ignited the beacon were unknown.

Verne Tyler, of Riverside, representing 150 certificate holders in the club, was reported in Los Angeles today with a view of possible bankruptcy action against the club.

"HELLO" GIRLS IN SANTA ANA AGAIN HONORED

For the second month, the Santa Ana "hello" girls of the U. S. long distance exchange have won a high rating in the contest among the Southern California offices for the two cups awarded the exchanges that make the best records.

Last month, Santa Ana won the first cup but Redondo took that away. In its stead, the second cup is now on the "mantle piece."

Los Angeles, Redondo and San Bernardino are the only offices in Southern California to have won both the first and second cups. None of the exchanges have won the first place cup twice, although that is the objective of the Santa Ana girls, according to Miss Elsie Stuvelling, chief operator.

So the sweet voices of the Santa Ana girls will insure, more than ever, quick connections.

The increase in business at the Santa Ana office has necessitated adding another girl to the switchboard operators. She is Miss Ruth Welch. One of the Santa Ana girls, Mrs. Ruth Smith, was promoted to chief operator at Fullerton and her place on the Santa Ana switchboard is being taken by Miss Edna Dean, transferred here from Fullerton.

Santa Ana's record for the past month surpassed that of the month before, when the big first prize cup was won, but Redondo forged ahead of the Santa Ana exchange because of an unusual increase. Santa Ana almost achieved the distinction of being the first exchange of the Southland to win the first prize cup twice, the record for the past month disclosed.

Two Given Short Jail Sentences

Pat Musick, 21, and A. R. Johnson, 21, Los Angeles, arrested here Sunday night on suspicion of stealing gasoline from cars parked on the streets, were each given five day jail terms in City Recorder Andrew Wilson's court yesterday.

Both started their sentences last night.

The two men were arrested by Officers Wolford and Hershey near 1120 Oak street. A gasoline can, partly filled, was found near a car said to have been operated by the two men.

Villa Park Man To Develop Tract

VILLA PARK, Aug. 23.—A. M. Caspari will begin work on a project in Arizona in the near future. He will take two tracts and a road grading crew to Welton, Ariz., where he will lay out a townsite and develop about 8000 acres of land.

CITY COUNCIL WOULD PERMIT APARTMENTS ON BROADWAY

Recommendation Is Made To Planning Body to Open Street to North

NEW BUILDING LAW IS GIVEN APPROVAL

Municipal Band to Be Sent To San Diego and Play At Annual County Fair

Recommendation to the city planning commission that North Broadway be opened to apartment houses north from Washington avenue to Santa Clara avenue, and adoption of building, plumbing and electrical ordinances that it is hoped will be adopted by other incorporated cities in the county were principal features of business transacted by the city council last night.

Application of Wm. Rohrbacker for permission to erect a 120,000 apartment house at 1498 North Broadway developed discussions that led to the recommendations to the planning commission. Apartment house construction on Broadway is restricted to Seventeenth street under the zoning ordinance adopted a short time ago.

Councilmen expressed the opinion that restriction should not prevail north of Washington avenue. The councilmen also recommended that a reasonable setback line be established on the street.

Taking advantage of a new law passed at the last session of the legislature, the council adopted the building, plumbing and electrical ordinances developed by the Orange County Builders exchange in co-operation with city authorities, and their publication would have The ordinances are voluminous cost a small fortune. The new law makes it possible to make this type of ordinance effective by posting. It is anticipated that all incorporated cities in the county will follow the lead of Santa Ana.

With requests coming from San Diego and Anaheim for services of the Santa Ana municipal band, the musical organization was prominently before the council. One of the first actions of the evening was granting the request of the San Diego fair association for the band on the opening night of the fair in that city, the San Diego association agreeing to pay half the expense connected with the appearance of the organization.

Another Request

Later in the evening, George Raymer, Bruce Switzer and Flake Smith appeared and requested that the organization be sent to the seaport city on the excursion the junior division of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce is arranging for September 16.

Mayor F. L. Purinton was authorized to communicate with Felix Landis, secretary of the San Diego Fair association, and ascertain whether the fair management would be agreeable to a change in the date of the appearance of the Santa Ana organization. If so, the band either will accompany the boat excursion to San Diego on Friday or go down by motor bus and be at the dock to greet the Santa Ana excursionists when they arrive at San

CANVASSING OF HOME TO HOME TYPE IS HARD

One of the worst cases a salesman meets is what is popularly known as a "whoist." In the San Francisco region particularly, apartment dwellers can open their doors from upstairs. They stare out from upper windows and demand:

"Whoist?"

What kind of a demonstration or talk can be made, the salesmen ask, if they must crane their necks at a 45 degree angle while the woman above shouts warnings to a swarm of kiddies behind her?

A button pusher, however, must know everything. Not only must he know his own article, but if a kindly woman invites him in and then asks him to repair a smoking fireplace, it's up to him to do it with a smile. Of course he knows how. His first job is to inspire confidence.

The service man of the various specialties which canvassers market, meets his grief too. He may be asked to fix anything in the world except the article he is paid to service. It is not uncommon, one service man declared, to travel 15 or 20 miles on a hurry call to make an adjustment on a washing machine. Usually on these long trips there is nothing wrong. The lady has simply forgotten to turn on the switch on the light cord.

A case is on record, too, of an irate woman who owned a washer driven by a gas engine. She filled the gas tank with motor oil and heaped abuse on the head of the service man because she must wait for him to drain the oil out.

Many people dread two things—total paralysis and death by fire. When a young man, happily married, is confronted by both, and sees his wife menaced by the latter as he lies helpless, there's tense, vivid drama—the kind that chills the blood and holds one breathless with horror.

Such is one of the situations in "The Country Doctor," in which Rudolph Schildkraut plays the title role, and which closes at the Yost Broadway theater tonight. It was directed by Rupert Julian, who made "The Yankee Clipper," "Merry-Go-Round" and "Three Faces East." It is said that "The Country Doctor" surpasses his previous triumphs.

In addition to Mr. Schildkraut, the featured players in the cast are Junior Coghlan, Sam De Grasse, Virginia Bradford and Louis Natheaux. The screen play was written by Beulah Marie Dix.

TEMPLE THEATER

"Stella Dallas" reaches the screen as a happy combination of a producer who had vision and faith in a great novel, a director known for his ability to handle themes of deep human sympathy, with a cast that is considered unsurpassed—both for appeal and ability.

Dramatic points and counter points, peaked with emotion, fill every reel of "Stella Dallas." In it are youth, beauty, romance and a deep underlying pathos which endows the film with a fullness of spirit and richness of unusual situations that alternately streak the cheeks with tears and wreath the face with smiles.

NOT GUILTY IS PLEA OF FOUR IN U. S. COURT

Four defendants, charged with participation in the theft of 80 cases of liquor from the Orange county court house in 1925, pleaded not guilty in federal court yesterday, in Los Angeles.

The four were Orlo Hobbs, Herbert Eldred, Claude Williams and Ray Wallace, all well known here. A change in the indictment against the four, made in federal court, which alleged the theft took place approximately two months later than the date named in the first complaint, necessitated the men being in court yesterday, although they had previously entered pleas of not guilty.

The council also voted to send the band to Anaheim for a concert at the Greek theater there some time in the future, the council of Anaheim requesting the courtesy of a concert by the local band. When presented, the program will be given on a Wednesday evening.

The 40 waste paper receptacles recently attached and taken from the street corners because the Outdoor Advertising company failed to pay the license tax it agreed to, will soon make their reappearance on the streets as property of the city of Santa Ana. City Engineer Clyde Jenken was instructed to have the containers repainted and to change the color so that the cans would not so much resemble postoffice boxes on the street corners. When in use on the street the waste paper cans often were mistaken for postoffice boxes and letters frequently were found in them.

Easement over the Bennett property for proposed extension of a main sewer line from the south end of Grand avenue to Chestnut street was under discussion. Extension of the street through the Bennett property at some time in the future was considered possible by the city council, and plans now contemplated laying the pipe line across the property in what would probably be the center of the street when it is extended.

The Cope Electric company was given permission to install Neonite illumination on the Standard Oil station at Tenth and Main streets.

A check was accepted from the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company for $356.07 in payment of the company's franchise tax.

Bids for supplying the city with 600 water meters were submitted and referred to the city manager and city engineer for checking. Similar action was taken with bids for supplying the city with tires for a year.

Request of A. J. Mansur for permission to cut the pavement on Wilshire avenue for installation of a gas service line at 416 Wilshire was referred to the city engineer.

J. L. McBride, as a committee-man, reported that the city had no jurisdiction over a gravel pit in the 1700 block on West Eighth street, and recommended that protests against operation of the pit be denied.

G. W. Young was employed to plaster two small houses for housing pumping plants of the city. The cost of plastering is estimated at $210 for one and $160 for the other.

An appropriation of $150 was made for a city exhibit at the county fair and a similar amount to be matched by an appropriation of state money by the fair association, as a prize in one of the stock competition events at the county fair.

Commerce Work Soon On River Bridge At Olive

OLIVE, Aug. 23.—In 10 days work will be started on the new Santa Ana river bridge northwest of Olive. It was stated today by George Rossiter, foreman of the construction work.

The cost of the bridge is estimated to be about $175,000.

Andree's Mad Venture

SKETCHES BY BESSEY
SYNOPSIS BY BRAUCHER

By Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge. Copyright, 1923-26.

When the Fram arrived at Spitzbergen, the balloonist, Andree, was preparing his mad, brave enterprise to fly by balloon to the North Pole. Dr. Ekholm and Dr. Strindberg were helping him to prepare the air craft that the world looked upon as one of man's wildest schemes. Andree, however, was undaunted.

Andree set sail in his balloon for the Pole soon after the Fram's arrival. He never again was seen by mortal eyes.

Meantime Nansen had decided he never could reach the Pole in time for provisions for the crew to hold out.

Taking with him a brother spirit, Frederick Hjalmar Johansen, Nansen set out with dog team and sledge toward the coveted goal. It was March, 1895, when these two men started their brave journey and for the next fifteen months they looked on no human faces but one another's. They were to face appalling difficulties.

The milk and butter that they had, of course made all the wee folk glad. They gathered round the campfire where the beans were cooking well. They watched the water bubble high, and Clowny shortly shouted, "My, most everything we've got looks good. This sur ly will be swell."

Their interest now was much increased. "Where shall we have our dandy feast?" asked Scouty as he looked around to find the proper spot. "We cannot eat upon the ground, 'cause that's where lots of ants are found. They'd get upon our food and spoil our meat, as like as not."

"I know a place," one Goofy said. And then he pointed straight ahead. "That great big rock will serve us well. It's big and round and flat." The others looked at the big rock o'er, and then they heard wee Carpy roar, "That's sure a fine suggestion. There's no better place than that."

By this time, all the beans were done, and all the bunch had heads of fun just watching Coppy take them from the blaze and serve them round. For plates they found some dandy shells, and in a moment loud yells, the whole bunch gathered round the rock and squatted on the ground.

Such food they'd never had before. At first they wished that there was more, but as they ate, they soon filled up, as stuffed as they could be. The corn was spread with butter thick. You'd think 'twould almost make them sick. But gee, it never bothered them, like it would you and me.

In half an hour the meal was done. Wee Clowny said, "I guess I'll run around so I can soon digest my food, and feel real good. He jumped up to his feet and then he almost fell right down again. Said he, "I'll have to rest instead." The whole crowd knew he would."

THE WOMAN'S DAY
by ALLENE SUMNER

"The girls" don't see why in the name of creation Barbara doesn't get herself some clothes. "The girls" meaning the remainder of the feminine faction in the office where Barbara toils, know perfectly well that Barbara makes as much if not more, money than they do—and look at her! She always wears the same winter coat at least three years, she has her shoes re-soled and even darns her stockings! She generally has just about three office dresses, and all the rest of "the girls" keep at least six, one for each day in the week, in rotation. Oh, Barbara looks good enough, but she just never has anything really good! She wears no more than $10 hats, carries $3.95 handbags, and would die before she'd pay $500 for a fur coat, and "everybody" has to have fur coats nowadays.

And I haven't a doubt that she'll get both those dreams and all the others which she uses as a measuring stick against the prescribed and taken-for-granted needs of the "other girls." Barbara is deemed "queer" because her needs and desires are a bit different from the generally accepted ones of fine clothes, an auto, radio, the follies, and bridge parties.

But she has built up an emergency shelf of interests which are so much more satisfying to her than even diamond rings and fur coats are to the "other girls" that I think her much more to be envied.

THEY'RE BLIND
What "the girls" don't consider, however, are the things which Barbara has which they do not. Blinded by their own set of values, they cannot see Barbara's set. Barbara is neither stinky nor uninterested in clothes. She just happens to want other things worse, and knows that she can't have both.

THE HAT
I went on a shopping spree one noon hour with Barbara. Barbara was looking for a hat. She found one just made for her—black and large and droopy and made of straw almost as fine as silk. It was priced $25. Barbara wanted that hat and I knew it. There was another hat much the same style, but made of coarser straw. It was priced $12.50. Barbara toyed with one and then the other. She bought the cheaper one.

"After all, there's another $12.50 for the spring-in-Italy ginger jar," said Barbara, "that would mean enough for four days' living. That could mean four days in Florence. And I guess that four days to live with Raphael and Michelangelo

Beauty and Health
by Edna Kent Forbes

WHAT SHOULD YOU WEIGH?

Health and strength and beauty come to you from what you eat and drink. We should have the instinct of many animals, as to what is good for us at different times, and how much of it, and when no food at all is best. But we haven't—at least, not many of us have. Certainly those of us who grow too fat have not the instinct that tells us when to stop eating.

The beauty of your figure certainly depends on what you eat. Whatever else you do, keep slender. If you take a lot of exercise, you probably won't have much trouble obeying this first command of beauty, but if you live the normal life of women in the cities and small towns today, you probably don't get enough exercise, at least, not enough of the right sort, so diet must do for you what really healthy exercise has no chance to do. No one need be fat only the exceptional few who suffer from one form of gland trouble—and I believe that is curable!

The first question is, what should you weigh? Your own aesthetic sense will tell you whether you are too thin or too plump. If it doesn't measure yourself very carefully, shoes off, back, heels and head against a wall. Look up any insurance tables, they will give you your correct weight for your height and your age. You can take off five or ten pounds for luck, too, the insurance tables are most awfully generous in weight allowance!

Then to find how much food you should eat in caloric measurements, multiply the number of pounds you are by 15 if you don't do much exercise, by 16 if you get a little in each day (a walk, a game of tennis, or some light housework) by 17 if fairly strenuous, by 18 if quite strenuous—washing, or quite hard outdoor exercise—up to 20 if you do the most violent exercise such as eight or ten hours laundry or scrubbing a day.

Take 15 or 16 for your figure, to be safe; 15 times 125 pounds is 1875 calories a day for you, for instance.

E. R. A.—After a few more years of development your legs will not be so conspicuous, as your whole body will be slimmer and proportions improved. Most girls and boys too, are troubled as you are but it is just a passing period toward completed growth, and no one thinks anything of it.

Anxious—if you rub a piece of cut cucumber over your skin every few days, it will be all that you need to keep it bleached from ordinary tanning. Wash off the juice afterward and rub in a very little bit of cream to make up to the skin the oil that is taken from it by the bleaching.

Tomorrow—Tonics For Your Hair.

Child's Courage Depends On Mother

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

The mother of a fine sturdy little boy dreamed dreams of his future.

He had always shown great prowess in the field of sport. He could outrun, outclimb, and—mark you—outwit most of his companions.

Before he was able to read, she would read to him—stories of Vikings, discoverers, crusaders and chiefs.

She gloried in his strength and in the keen mind that governed his strength. He was to be captain of a college team some day and later a captain of industry.

"You're iron, David," she would say to him. "Now you say it."

"I'm iron!" David would repeat after her, willing to humor his pretty ambitious mother.

"You can do anything, David. Now say that." And David would say it. He waxed stronger and sturdier. Then one day he had an accident, and infection set in. After a year's battle he recovered. But his strength was gone and he was partially crippled. He would never now be a leader among men, it was evident.

He was unhappy and bitter. His life was ruined and he spent days upon days crying. Because his broken-hearted mother, instead of saying, "David, you are iron. You can bear anything and so can I," wept with him. She could not and did not hide her disappointment. She lived on the sympathy of her friends and the boy had a double burden when he realized the unhappiness he had brought on her.

Years passed. To the surprise of everyone his weakness and disability passed almost completely. But never the cruel consciousness of a physical inferiority. The complex had broadened and deepened. He made no effort of any kind toward the success that had once looked so certain. The physical complex had brought mental inertia, a feeling of futility which he never got rid of.

Mothers, no matter what happens, trip to keep up the moral courage of your children. Once gone, almost nothing can bring it back.

ACORNS CINCH INDOOR TITLE IN SOUTHLAND

Farrow's Home Run Brings Defeat to Arlington in Hard Fought Playoff Go

When the Long Beach Acorns took a torrid game from the Arlington indoor baseball team last night, the Acorns automatically clinched the pennant in the Southern California playoff. The game was of big league caliber last night.

The fast Arlington aggregation led the Long Beach boys up until the seventh inning and behind the peerless pitching of Forbes their stellar twirler, it looked as if they had the game on ice.

Then in the unlucky seventh, or the unlucky seventh, as the case may be, Farrow, seaside catcher, connected solidly and the ball flew out of the lot. Two men were on base ahead of Farrow and the ball game was put away right there. It took the heart out of the Arlington boys.

Morning, pitching ace of the Long Beach team was not so good last night and Arlington bought in three runs in the early innings. Kohler another star moundman took his place in the seventh inning and held the Arlington boys scoreless for the remainder of the game.

Long Beach cannot lose the pennant now. It has only one more game to play, that with Santa Ana, and if Santa Ana did win, it would not affect the standing as Long Beach has defeated Arlington twice and Santa Ana once. The seaside team is the present holder of the pennant.

Santa Ana has dropped a game to Arlington and a game to Long Beach and can only tie for second place by winning from Arlington at Arlington tomorrow night and then defeating Long Beach here Friday night.

Baker, Adams Are Ready For Fight

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Sergeant Sammy Baker, New York soldier waterweight, and Johnny Adams, San Bernardino 147-pounder, engaged in heavy workouts today for their battle of 10 rounds or less at Wrigley field, next Monday night.

Baker with several weeks' training at Sophie's ranch in preparation for a junior welterweight title bout with Mushy Callahan, 140-pound champion, which was later cancelled, is in excellent shape.

Adams, who last Friday knocked out Jimmy Cottrell, of Portland, in the tenth round, is conditioning at Ocean Park.

Airtight fielding and good pitching on the part of the Platt Silvertowns and Eeny Wilcox, won another baseball game for the Silvertowns boys last night at Lincoln park. The Platts bowled the Santa Ana Lumber company team over 5 to 0. Wilcox matched his skill against that of Jensen, one of the leading pitchers of the league and the result is interesting.

SANTA ANAN IS DEFEATED BY HELEN WILLS

FOREST HILLS, Aug. 23.—Rain forced postponement this afternoon of today's play in the national women's singles tennis championships.

By MARY K. BROWNE
(Copyright, 1927, by United Press)

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The curtain is up on the first act of the big tennis show. No cues were forgotten. All went according to dope, with the exception of the default of Mrs. Godfree, England's first star and former Wimbledon champion, on account of illness.

The first day of the women's national tennis championship, was as usual, devoted to the "hounding" of the "rabbits" as the higher ups terms the "weaker" opponents.

Helen Wills led the pack and ran her rabbit, Josephine Crookshank, of California, to earth with the loss of but one game. Josephine came east to compete for the girl's championship and her entry in the national is simply in the nature of experience.

The paramount concern of all the contestants in the championship is, who have I drawn and if I get by my first match, who will I meet next.

There are 64 entries with 16 seeded players in each half which would offhand seem to even up things so each of the finalists would have had about the same relative strength to overcome.

This year, however, the "breaks" are in favor of Helen Wills. She has the easy half of the draw. Out of the eight players seeded in her half only four are of sufficient strength to even be considered as having a remote chance of defeating Helen.

Of the four Mrs. Godfree had defaulted; Kea Boman, the French and Holland champion, is playing under the severe handicap of sprained back muscles. Helen Jacobs, of California, and Eileen Bennett of England will, if they succeed in winning their preliminary matches, meet each other and Helen Wills will contend with only the winner. She has defeated both of them this season in straight sets.

It is a different story for Mrs. Molla Mallory, the present national champion, who is in the other half of the draw. If Molla is successful in reaching the finals she will first have to eliminate Gwen-dolyn S. Terry, the English girl, who took the only set that Helen Wills lost this year at Wimbledon. Then Molla will find herself facing the winner of the Joan Fry vs. Mrs. Chapin match.

You'd Be SURPRISED!

BY BILLY EVANS

MUFFED THE CHANCE TO DRIVE IN 12 RUNS IN ONE GAME

While sluggers get the big thrill out of hitting a home run with the bases filled, nothing can cause greater remorse than failure to hit in the pinch. To strike out with the bases filled is regarded as the toughest possible blow.

I doubt if in all the history of baseball any great slugger ever experienced a more unpleasant day than did Sherwood Magee back in 1905. In his day, Magee was regarded as one of the best batsmen in the National league. In 1910 he broke Hans Wagner's streak of four championships in a row, by taking down the honors.

The records reveal the interesting information that in a certain game in 1905, Magee went to bat five times, with chances to drive in 12 runs, yet failed in each instance to score a single man.

On three occasions, Magee, then with the Philadelphia Nationals, stepped to the plate with the bases filled and the fans yelling for a home run. Once there were runners on second and third, waiting for a timely hit. The other time up he left a runner stranded on third.

Magee, who is now a minor league umpire, says he regards that afternoon as the toughest day of his career, despite some mighty unpleasant ones trying to satisfy fans and players as an umpire.

LA BARBA WILL MEET VACCA IN HIS LAST BOUT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—Fidel La Barba, world's flyweight champion, plays the leading role in the "Kid's Last Fight" at the Olympic here tonight when he opposes Johnny Vacca, of Boston, in the 10 round main event.

La Barba has announced that win, lose or draw the bout terminates his fist career, which in two years has netted him more than $75,000. He will enter Stanford University next month.

The 112-pound title will not be at stake in this battle as the fighters are signed to make not more than 118 pounds at 2 p. m. today.

Odds favor La Barba over the Bostonian, despite the fact that the latter holds two decisions at catchweights over the champion.

Vacca, stablemate of Jack Sharkey, the "Lucky Lithuanian", is a member of the talkative school, freely predicting that he will knock out La Barba inside the limit.

Britt Gorman, Minneapolis flyweight, and Alfredo Imperial, both known as possible successors to La Barba's crown. They meet in the semi-windup.

Rudolfo Ramirez and Jimmy Piel, featherweights, clash in the special event.

Two four rounders complete the card.

"CHICK" EVANS SCORES 150 IN GOLF TOURNEY

BY CLARK B. KELSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 23.—One of the old masters of American golf, "Chick" Evans of Chicago, breezed home among the early qualifiers in the National Amateur championship Tuesday with an aggregate of 150 for his two rounds.

Evans, first of the favorites to finish added a 75 today to his 75 of Monday, and was certain to be among the lowest scorers of the 32 golfers who will start match play tomorrow.

With Bobby Jones, George Von Elm and other favorites scheduled for late starts, Evans drew a large gallery and rewarded those who followed him with a brilliant exhibition. It was in 1916 that "Chick" won the National open on this same course.

The popular Chicago amateur was not putting with his accustomed accuracy, but his remarkable play through the field enabled him to include three birdies in his card.

While no definite plans have been announced by Columbia, her next rowing objective is rumored to be the Olympic championship. The one big hitch in this dream is that the Columbians would be forced to forego a defense of the championship won at Poughkeepsie this year were they to participate in the Olympic championship next year. Perhaps a way will be found for her crew to take part in both events.

Campus Comment

BOB MATHERNE

There remain only a few more weeks before football, with all its thrills and disappointments, will be with us.

Despite the Tunney-Dempsey fight, the big tennis and golf meets and other sport attractions of the day, football is beginning to occupy more and more space in one's daily talk.

One of the most discussed phases of the coming football season, especially in Big Ten circles, is the coming introduction of the Pop Warner system to that conference by Dick Hanley, coach at Northwestern.

Hanley knows the Warner system. He learned it as a player under Pop Warner while at Washington State. He used it successfully as a coach while directing the Haskell Indians. He's confident that his teams at Northwestern will grasp the new system easily and use it with much success.

If any two things predominate about the Warner system, they are speed and deception. Warner's teams at Stanford used speed and deception as have few teams in football history.

And another thing, smartness is a big factor in the Warner system, as it is in most systems.

The college player was handed quite a severe rebuke a few years ago by one prominent manager and, about the same time, was complimented highly by another. Clarke Griffith of the Washington club showered out the praise by saying he thought the college player had the better opportunity

DEMPEY TO START TRAINING IN WEEK

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Jack Dempsey will continue training today for his fight with Gene Tunney, but his program will not reach the strenuous stage for another week.

Only eight pounds above the weight that Manager Leo Flynn has fixed for him for the fight, the former champion is approaching the grind slowly and will do little else than road work and setting up exercises for at least another week.

Today Flynn expected to send Dempsey around the Lincoln Fields race track at Crete, Ill., a few times and have him shadow box, skip the rope and punch the bag. That isn't a very heavy program, but it's all the big boy will do for another 10 days. Flynn believes it sufficient to keep him in condition. Those who advise Dempsey suggested that he defer even this work for a few days, but Jack, chafing at the tediousness of his social duties broke away yesterday to inspect his camp.

John McGraw of the New York Giants handed out the rebuke. He condemned the practice employed by many star college players of taking money to continue their education from one club and then, after graduation, either signing with another club or deciding to stay out of the game.

NIMRODS ARE BANNED FROM GREAT RANCH

Estimate 150,000 Hunters Will Be Affected, Step Taken to Prevent Fires

What has for many years been the biggest and almost the only hunting grounds in Southern California was closed to the public today, when the Irvine ranch company finished posting "no hunting" signs on its 119,000 acres of hill and ranch land in Orange county.

More than 600 deer hunters, and approximately 150,000 dove, rabbit and quail hunters who have annually visited the Irvine ranch will have to find a new hunting ground.

The ranch company step was taken in a move to co-operate with government officials in reducing the fire hazard in the hills, according to R. E. Reed, chief deputy for the ranch company.

Reed announced today that several extra deputies were being hired at the ranch and that all the Irvine company has cattle pastured in many of the hunting sections have caused the company to ban hunting. Reed pointed out that the minimum fine for hunting on the ranch would be $25. Several hunters who have been caught on the ranch have been brought before Justice Kenneth Morrison.

The big range of the Irvine ranch was practically the only place left in Southern California and the only place in Orange county where rabbit, quail and dove hunting has been allowed. The O'Neill ranch which touches in Orange county and runs far into San Diego county, has been closed to hunters for several years.

B. & P. W. GIRLS HEAR TALK ON BULB ROMANCE

The romance of bulbs, with special reference to the iris family, was made clear to members of the Business and Professional Women's club yesterday at their weekly luncheon in St. Ann's Inn, when Mrs. Myrtle Hanna, of the Highway Bulb gardens, was introduced as speaker.

Mrs. Hanna touched briefly on the practical side of bulb gardening, especially as applied to the local plant, where she and her husband started eight years ago with a few dozen bulbs. Each year they have doubled their planting area and their output until this year they have 15 acres under cultivation and an assortment of the finest bulb plants to be grown. Next year they plan to have 25 acres in bulbs alone.

After this little explanation of the extent of the local venture, the speaker told the interested clubwomen why to her the iris bore more charm than any other of the varied families of bulb plants. She sketched in its known history going back to early Greece where the iris was planted at the temples and at the tombs. Egypt, too, knew the lovely bloom, and it has been said that the iris symbol was stamped on the forehead of the Sphinx.

In the days of the early Franks, it was one of their chosen emblems, and when knighthood was in flower, the iris symbolized its full, fine flowering.

"In 1240 when Edward III of England, claimed the French throne," declared Mrs. Hanna, "he embodied the iris with the British lion on the flag of England, and there it remained until 1803."

Its development in the orient was also touched upon, and then the speaker came to the present day, with an explanation of the manifold uses to which the plant may be put in landscape gardening. The wide range to be obtained, gives a gardener the advantage of planting iris in almost any conceivable spot, as there are varieties that attain the height of six feet, others that grow in low clumps, still others that have a fondness for growing in pools. And all offer the beauty of foliage when blooming time is ended.

That the various varieties may be distinguished by their bulbs, was shown as the different tubers were offered for inspection. Many questions were asked at the conclusion of the talk, and amateur gardeners among the members were given many valuable hints by the kindly speaker.

Several guests shared the interest of the meeting, including Miss Menzie, of Santa Cruz, Miss Sarah Wood, of Oakland, Miss Garrett and Miss Bertha Bolz.

President Laura Murray introduced the question of sending a delegate to the state convention in San Francisco, September 3, 9 and 10, and it was voted to defray all expenses of the president or her proxy. It is probable that Mrs. Minnie Mayhill will be the one named.

Members were asked to submit original limericks in the competition to be instituted by the state organization, and Miss Teresa McDonour and Attorney Clara Cushman were named as judges to pass on those sent in, and select the best one to be sent as the Santa Ana club's entrant.

Three Sentenced On Drunk Charge

Three Mexicans, arrested Saturday night, when officers are alleged to have found them with two chickens, said to belong to Mrs. Manuel Garcia, pleaded guilty to drunk charges in City Recorder Andrew Wilson's court yesterday.

Each was fined $100 with an alternate of spending 60 days in jail and each decided to serve the time.

The arrests were first made by Santa Ana's new shotgun squad.

The arrests were made after Mrs. Garcia reported that the men were making a disturbance in the vicinity of her home.

SANITATION AT FAIR GROUNDS TO BE WATCHED

Measures designed to insure sanitation and protect public health at the coming county fair will be taken by the county health department under the supervision of Dr. K. H. Sutherland, deputy county health officer, it was announced today by Dr. V. G. Presson, county health officer.

The county health department, Dr. Presson declared, will, as usual, enforce all regulations on all food and drink dispensing concessions. Likewise, the fair management as well as operators of exhibits, will be required to maintain high standards of sanitation in places within their control.

Sanitary inspectors will be stationed on the fair grounds with instructions to enforce the state regulations on fair grounds, particularly as they relate to toilet facilities, disposal of garbage and the handling of food.

Dr. Presson called special attention to the following section of the state regulations:

"All places where foodstuffs are sold or exposed for sale must be made fly-tight by screening all openings with wire screening of not less than 14-mesh. Adequate facilities for the proper washing of dishes must be provided in all such places. The term 'foodstuffs' includes both raw and cooked food, candy and any other food not sold in single service containers."

THROUGH all the stages of price wars—mail-order lures and "bargain" tires—climaxed by the reclaimed rubber epidemic that has required but a year to prove itself the most expensive experiment tire buyers have had to stand—the quality tire comes out on top.

General Tire makes biggest sales gain in the industry

And what a gain it has been—never taking new car equipment contracts, never supplying mail-order-houses or turning out secondary lines for big volume records, but depending solely on the personal preference of car owners purchasing tires through dealers—General gains 40% more sales in dollars and cents, for the first half of this year.

In all the history of the tire business never such a popular swing to one make of tire.

What a tribute of public confidence has been paid to General's policy of never tampering with quality.

Seasoned contemporaries started placing the sales limit for General's top quality when it reached five millions—again at ten—again at twenty millions.

But today with General's gain far ahead of the industry we have the spectacle of tire buyers the country over swinging more and more to quality and further and further away from fictitious values.

Quality is setting the pace for volume.

LEARNED JUDGES FOLLOW IN FOOTSTEPS OF CRIME HERE

Although the grand jury investigation is a thing of the past and despite the fact that but two indictments resulted from the fracas, officials and employees at the Orange county court house and hall of records are still following in the footsteps of crime, an investigation revealed today.

It is not impossible to see even a learned judge going along the road once trod by jailbirds and criminals. In fact, in this so-called degenerate age, it has become largely a matter of necessity to take the easiest way in order to keep up with the pace established by the faster set.

That all this goes on at the court house without causing the slightest comment, may be taken as an indication that county officials are more calloused, even, than grand jury testimony purported to show.

On the other hand it may be argued that those who are most frequent in traveling the pathway of crime are not conscious of the significance of their acts. They scarcely realize that the untitled, seeing them, are very likely to take the easiest way themselves.

That officers of the county are not more to be censured than the public at large, however, may be deduced from the fact that anyone having business at the court house and hall of records would probably take the same course. The truth of the matter seems to be that the county supervisors are to blame for the situation, although at present they do not seem to be the worst offenders.

For the supervisors, little realizing, perhaps, that they were blazing a path through the haunts of criminals, have caused the construction of a two-decked bridge which leads from the court house to the hall of records. Not the least important aspect of the situation is the fact that the new bridge passes directly through the space formerly occupied by the cells which held criminals and asserted bad men in the old county jail.

The ghosts of these terrible persons may be lingering there still and many a truthful lawyer or fair stenographer has unwittingly paused on the bridge in the spot where once a would-be Jesse James has stood.

Without question the easiest way has been found and it lies across the new bridge from the court house to the hall of records. If you don't believe it, try the old route up and down stairs and along the street between the two buildings.

Houdini Secrets Sought By Thief

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Thieves failed to secure secrets of Houdini, the magician, when they broke into the Brooklyn home of his brother, Theodore Weiss Hardeen, the police were told.

Jewels, linen, other valuables and $15,000 in Liberty bonds were available to the thieves, but left untouched, Hardeen told police. The Flight of Time and the Chinese torture cell equipment, however, valuable parts of the late magician's paraphernalia, were hidden and were not found by the thieves.

The break was reported Monday when Hardeen returned from a vaudeville tour. Hardeen said he thought the attempted robbery occurred several weeks ago.

STRIKES FEWER IN ARGENTINA REPORT SHOWS

Buenos Aires, Aug. 23.—A total of 1,179,762 workers went on strike in Argentina during the last 10 years, according to government statistics. Wages lost due to the 1,421 strikes that took place from 1917 up to 1927 totaled 73,273,270 paper pesos, or $35,549,549.

Of the total number of strikers during the last decade, 1,052,261 were men, 89,219 were women, and the remaining 38,282 were minors of both sexes.

The greatest number of strikes, 367, took place in 1919, and the smallest number, 62, took place in 1926. In 1919 a total of 308,967 workers were affected and in 1926 only 4737.

The decade's total of 1421 strikes were declared for the following reasons: wages, 617; organization, 528; question of hours, 96; unsatisfactory conditions, 51; and miscellaneous, 129.

Garment workers declared the largest number of strikes in any one trade, these affecting 501,102 persons. Next in order were transportation and communications workers with 232 strikes affecting 295,931 persons. Third came the metal trades with 190 strikes affecting 115,983 workers.

Of the total of 1421 strikes, 381 were won outright by the strikers, 217 were settled by compromise, and 821 produced no results for the strikers.

From a detailed study of the figures of the decade under consideration, it can be noted that strikes are on the wane in Argentina. Thus, 933 strikes affecting 852,838 men were declared during the second five-year-period.

The following table represents the number of men affected by strikes during the last five years:

|      |         |
|------|---------|
| 1922 | 4,737   |
| 1923 | 19,190  |
| 1924 | 275,978 |
| 1925 | 14,057  |
| 1926 | 4,737   |

The disproportionate number of men striking in 1924 was due to a railway strike affecting more than 100,000 workers.

Court Asked To Protect Hubby's Girl From Wife

DENVER, Aug. 23.—The district court is to decide whether Mrs. Mary S. Martinez, a wife, or Miss Delphina Luna, an alleged affinity, is at fault in the squabble over the affections of John S. Martinez, a Denver businessman, it has developed here.

The alleged affinity—Miss Luna, of the Bristol hotel—filed a petition for an injunction, prohibiting Mrs. Martinez from threatening her with bodily harm, from annoying her, and from accusing her falsely of attempting to win Martinez's affections.

In her complaint, Miss Luna alleges that Mrs. Martinez has flourished a revolver in the hotel, made threats to cut Miss Luna's tongue out and to mar her facial beauty with a sharp knife. The girl asks the court to order the wife to desist in such actions.

The squabble started when Mrs. Martinez filed a damage suit for $10,000 against Miss Luna, through her attorney, John T. Maloy. The wife alleged that Miss Luna had humiliated her by attempting to win her husband's love away from her; had sent Martinez messages and notes, and made telephone calls, and had taken him out riding in an automobile. She asked the court to enjoin the girl, 22 years old, from persisting in those acts.

Fast Passenger Train Cuts Time

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Aug. 23.—The fast express passenger train in the new fast service to Buenos Aires left here recently. It was scheduled to reach the Argentine capital in three days, the passengers making but one change enroute. Formerly, from five to six days were necessary to make this journey. The lost link of the La Paz-Buenos Aires railway was opened to traffic less than three years ago.

Blocks of salt were once used by the Chinese for paying taxes.

MUSSOLINI'S LIFE GUARDED BY FASCISTS

READING ONLY OPINION. BRITISH LORD INSISTS

PARIS, Aug. 22.—To anyone living in Italy under the special defense measures, feverishly adopted after the last attempt on the life of Mussolini in Bologna last October, it might seem that it is something besides Providence that has been protecting the Duce and the Fascist regime generally.

The ramifications of the special precautions that have been taken, and are still being taken, to protect the life of the Duce would be difficult to imagine by anyone not familiar with the facts from daily observation. To begin with, there is the question of the Duce's food. Since Mussolini's illness he has had to live largely on a milk diet. There is a well authenticated story of the cow which furnishes milk for the dictator.

There is a special cow kept in the grounds of the Villa Torlonia, on the outskirts of Rome, where the Duce lives. A special detective is employed to examine all the feed given to the cow, to see that she eats nothing poisonous. Although only a trusted servant is employed to milk the bovine, "milked" is only a relative term. The milker is watched by a detective. The milking over, a detective oversees the bottling process. The bottles are sealed under the watchful eye of a detective, and even after they are sealed the bottles are guarded until they reach the Duce's table.

The route from the Villa Torlonia to all the various ministries to which Mussolini travels daily is lined with policemen and plain clothes detectives. There are detectives in almost every doorway, and if Mussolini is expected along, shortly they don't hesitate to warn pedestrians to keep moving. Whenever Mussolini goes to the chamber of deputies there is always a cordon of ordinary police, carabinieri, Fascist militia and plain clothes detectives drawn around the building. Those possessing well authenticated passes to the building must submit their tickets for examination three or four times before they ever reach the door and two or three times afterward before they reach their seats.

Whenever it happens that both the chamber and the senate are in session simultaneously and Mussolini may decide to go from one to the other—a matter of three or four blocks—the streets between the two houses of Parliament are guarded with extraordinary care. Besides the regular contingent of servants of the state stationed in doorways there is always another contingent sent to the roofs of the houses situated along the route, so that the whole route is literally and constantly swept with human eyes. There is a persistent story that Mussolini's private limousine is equipped with special bullet-proof window glass. It is true that he never drives through the streets with the windows of his car open, even in summer.

CAMBRIDGE, Eng., Aug. 22.—Modern civilization is endangered by a universal habit of thoughtless reading, believes Lord Eustace Percy, president of the board of Education.

Lord Eustace told the annual conference of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland that reading had become an opiate to the entire world. He pleaded for more thought and less scanning of printed pages while the mind was practically asleep. Lord Eustace urged a return to the conditions when the Bible, "Pilgrims Progress" and Fox's "Book of Martyrs" were read carefully.

"The greatest need of today is reflection," he said, "and that can be encouraged only by the careful reading of worthwhile books. What we need to revive is the pulse of contemplation."

Hugh Walpole, the novelist, disagreed with Lord Eustace's picture of the past. He called it a "dirty, messy, insanitary and unthinking period."

"I do not think it matters so much what people read, if they take an interest in reading," said the novelist. "Since the war a great new reading class has sprung up. If we are too high-brow and too priggish in our attitude toward that public we shall only succeed in frightening it away."

DELEGATE TO EUROPE TELLS OF CONDITIONS

FULLERTON, Aug. 23.—Not at liberty to divulge details of the work done, Dr. Graham C. Hunter, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, who has just returned from a three months' stay in Europe, declared today that the special deputation appointed by the American committee on the rights of religious minorities, of which he was a member, accomplished a wonderful mission.

The group, which was authorized to visit such countries on the continent as they found practicable, for the purpose of studying the situation and problems of religious minorities, spent most of its time in Rumania.

"Our deputation went in a spirit of sympathetic recognition of the difficulties of the problem, and with an unprejudiced desire to secure the opinion of both majority and minority groups," Dr. Hunter declared today. "We received the most courteous treatment imaginable everywhere we went."

"Probably the most interesting feature of our entire trip was our visit to Austria. It was interesting to arrive there just after the revolution.

"The trouble there is undoubtedly the result of the rundown condition of Austria, of which hardly enough has been left to raise grain for Vienna. The country must, therefore, import much food, since the capital has more than twice as many people as Los Angeles. Vienna finds it very hard to sell her manufactures outside her borders because other countries, once open to her, now have heavy tariffs.

"I'll feeling between the mill hands in Vienna and the combined business and farmer group is pronounced. It is odd to see the farmers combine with business instead of with labor. Austria is allowed only a very small army, so that both parties have their own armed guards.

"Chancellor Seipel, the prime minister, gave me 15 minutes and talked about the churches and their relation to good will, but of course would not talk about political conditions. Few people with whom I have talked have any doubt that unrest is widespread among the city people of Europe, not only in France, but virtually everywhere. To attempt to crush it by denying it the right of free speech, of assembly, of the press, and of even justice in the courts, is merely to play with fire. Also, the source of the trouble is the rundown economic condition of a large part of Europe, which we in America, are most unwise to try to ignore."

WESTMINSTER

WESTMINSTER, Aug. 23.—A birthday party in honor of Mrs. Chester Campbell was given Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. H. Moldal. The party was a complete surprise to Mrs. Campbell and she received nice presents. Several guests from other places were present. Those attending from Westminster were Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cozad Jr., Mrs. C. W. Glendon, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. John Murdy, of Elmsig, who is doing his bit toward improvement of the town by commencing work on his garage building. He expects to spend approximately $1000 on repairs. A brick fire wall 12 inches thick is now being installed next to the post office. The radio room will be enlarged so as to enable the firm to carry a larger stock of materials.

Mr. and Mrs. John Murdy, of Westminster several years ago, are planning to move into the Salem house on Cherry street as soon as the repair work being done there is completed.

Lovers of Southern melodies and plantation songs will have opportunity to attend a concert at the church hall next Thursday evening. The Rev. and Mrs. McGriff, of the Baptist church in Santa Monica, will furnish the music. One-half of the proceeds, which will be a free will offering by the audience, will go to the Sunday school here and the other half will be given by the McGriffs to their Sunday school of the Baptist church.

A family reunion of the Cozads was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. McDaniel Sunday. Those enjoying the day were Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Ellis and daughter, Margaret, Mrs. V. M. Goetz and daughters, Maurine and Pauline, and Wilma Cozad, all of Long Beach, Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Finster and son, Le Roy, of Anaheim; Mrs. A. B. Mason, Mrs. Clyde Day, both of Glendora; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cozad Jr. and baby, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cozad Sr., Simeon Cozad and the hostess, Mr. and Mrs. McDaniel.

Word has been received from Mrs. M. C. Craig, who is spending three months visiting in Indiana, that she is enjoying a royal time with relations she has not seen for about 15 years.

The regular monthly meeting of the Happy Workers of the Presbyterian church will be held in the church hall the same as usual. The committee serving, of which Mrs. Ralph Baxter is chairman promises a good dinner.

Upon returning from their San Diego trip, which Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Day made this week-end, Mr. Day had to take to his bed with a severe attack of the grippe.

Miss Lottie Knox, who has clerked in the Day store for two years, has given up her position there and is spending her last week before her marriage to L. A. Hughes of Pasadena, at her home with her parents here, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Knox.

Marriage By Justice Hit By Minister

TUSTIN, Aug. 23.—Present day preachers are going broke and it is because of the justice of the peace, the Rev. R. A. Sawyer, pastor of the Methodist church here, declared in an address last night. The young people of today are deserting the minister and seeking the justice of the peace, he asserted.

"The result of the movement to leave the preachers and visit the judges is leading to more divorces," the Rev. Mr. Sawyer declared.

He said that of all the marriages he had performed, only one couple had been divorced. The Rev. Mr. Sawyer blamed the lack of spiritual responsibility in the justice courts for the failure of many marriages and declared that young people should turn to the church. He also stated that many ministers were forsaking the church because marriage fees, which form a large part of a pastor's salary, are lacking.

H. B. C. OF C. FIELD TOUR PLANNED BY CIVIC BODY

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Aug. 23.—Tours of the local oil fields, with an expert explaining the methods of drilling and describing the interesting features of the various wells, may be inaugurated within a short time if investigations to be made by chamber of commerce officials indicate that the tour can be conducted successfully.

Expressions of interest in the fields by visitors and a desire by many to know the way in which oil can be put down and made to produce oil from a depth of nearly a mile, is responsible for the agitation for the tour.

Whether a motor bus company will be induced to conduct the tour or whether a private expedition will be organized periodically is yet to be determined.

Letters in complaint of the dump of oil laden waters by tankers into the ocean nearer to the shore than 12 miles are to be mailed to the heads of oil companies by the secretary, L. C. Denslow, in response to a recommendation made to the chamber at a recent meeting.

A. J. Thibodeau, city attorney, was named by the chamber as a committee to attend a hearing of the railroad commission in Los Angeles at an early date, when a hearing on the application of the Los Angeles-Newport freight line for a re-adjustment of rates will be heard.

NEWPORT BEACH, Aug. 23.—The Hauser Construction company was authorized by the city council at a special meeting last night to erect a breakwater 750 feet long and 100 feet from the beach running west from the jetty. The breakwater is to be made of rock originally planned to be used for the continuation of the jetty beyond the end of the former jetty.

An understanding that a bond election in the amount of $150,000 to replace the rock and to dredge the entrance channel would be held at the same time as the election of the new city council, was an unexpected development of the special session.

Paul E. Kressly, city engineer, and K. B. Kump, construction engineer for the Hauser Construction company, testified as to the necessity of constructing the breakwater to prevent the sea from washing across the peninsula and nullifying the work which has been done on the jetty. The action of the two engineers was approved in speeches made by representatives of the Newport Harbor Yacht club, the Balboa Island Improvement association and the residents of the peninsula.

$150,000 JETTY BOND ISSUE IS PROPOSED AT NEWPORT BEACH; COUNCIL ORDERS BREAKWATER

NEWPORT BEACH, Aug. 23.—The Hauser Construction company was authorized by the city council at a special meeting last night to erect a breakwater 750 feet long and 100 feet from the beach running west from the jetty. The breakwater is to be made of rock originally planned to be used for the continuation of the jetty beyond the end of the former jetty.

An understanding that a bond election in the amount of $150,000 to replace the rock and to dredge the entrance channel would be held at the same time as the election of the new city council, was an unexpected development of the special session.

Paul E. Kressly, city engineer, and K. B. Kump, construction engineer for the Hauser Construction company, testified as to the necessity of constructing the breakwater to prevent the sea from washing across the peninsula and nullifying the work which has been done on the jetty. The action of the two engineers was approved in speeches made by representatives of the Newport Harbor Yacht club, the Balboa Island Improvement association and the residents of the peninsula.

Councilmen L. S. Wilkinson introduced the plan of raising a fund to continue the original plan for the extension of the jetty beyond the point where it now ends. After discussing the matter, the council decided that a bond issue was the most practical way. It was also decided to make the issue large enough to include a dredging program for the harbor entrance.

That people are apt to get a mistaken idea of the new work ordered was the assertion of Dr. Conrad Richter, mayor, who explained that the building of the breakwater will not necessitate the withholding of one pound of rock from the original jetty as called for in the election ordinance for the $500,000 voted. The breakwater will be built with a surplus of rock originally figured on for extending the jetty several hundred feet beyond its present end.

A special called meeting for the purpose of approving plans to be submitted by Kressly covering the breakwater work was scheduled for Friday night.

The council authorized the issuance of bonds in the amount of $235,443.50 covering unpaid assessments on work done by J. Paul Benson in Coroda del Mar. There were no protests. The bonds are to be issued in two denominations, $5 to be $1000 each and the remainder to be $702.22 each.

The body also authorized the construction of five ticket booths on the Newport pier and the removal of the present headquarters, as recommended by J. A. Winn, chief of police. The booths will be rented for ticket selling purposes. No solicitation will be allowed. Licenses are to be fixed at the next regular meeting.

The matter of leasing or selling tide lands on the north shore of the bay to applicants was referred to the committee of the whole for consideration.

Harold West, of Wintersburg, paid a $5 fine for passing traffic on the right. Neal McCollom, of Long Beach, was fined $25 for reckless driving. Rex Barnebee, of Los Angeles, paid $13 for a speed of 33 miles in a 20-mile zone.

It appears that Van Ronkel was tagged for a traffic violation. When he communicated with Judge Pann, he was treated with unexpected courtesy, according to his letter. The letter included a $25 money order in payment of the fine assessed by Judge Pann.

Cases heard recently by Judge Pann included that of Frank W. Peck, of Los Angeles, charged with reckless driving. Bond was fixed at $250 and date for hearing set as September 7. Mrs. Jane Haslett, of Los Angeles, posted a $25 bond on an intoxication charge. She is scheduled to appear August 29.

Further plans for advertising the city to motorists include the leasing of an advertising balloon to be suspended over the pier with the name of the city painted in huge letters on its side and a searchlight beam for night display.

TUSTIN CITY COUNCIL RACE ATTRACTS 15

TUSTIN, Aug. 23.—A hot fight looms here in the incorporation election scheduled for September 14. Fifteen names were suggested last night at a meeting of the local chamber of commerce as candidates for city council. Ten of the names were suggested by the incorporation committee of the chamber of commerce and five were suggested by members of the chamber from the floor. Nominating petitions for practically all the men mentioned and for city clerk and city treasurer were circulated and signed at the meeting.

Two persons were suggested for possible candidates for the city treasurer position, while only one name was submitted for the city clerk job.

The 15 suggested as candidates for city councilmen are William Huntley, B. A. Crawford, L. A. Reihl, Fred Schwendeman, Charles Logan, O. A. Leiby, R. H. Taylor, F. W. Thompson, H. H. Hannaford, J. A. Haskell, E. L. Kiser, Floyd Turner, B. F. Bewick, Art Lindsey and the Rev. S. F. Shiffier.

W. J. Pollard and William Leinberger were suggested as candidates for the office of city treasurer, and J. R. Harbour, local druggist, was named as a possible candidate for city clerk.

The nomination papers for the officers must be filed with the county clerk before next Wednesday noon it is reported. That other persons may file nomination papers for the various offices was reported at the meeting. Nomination blanks may be secured from the county clerk.

The movement of the chamber of commerce in suggesting the names of possible candidates was taken only to insure the success of the election by making sure that names would be on the ballot, it was announced at the meeting and action of the organization does not mean that the candidates named are endorsed by the body. More than 60 members of the chamber of commerce were present at last night's session, which was the regular monthly meeting. The affair was held in the Knights of Pythias hall and the Pythian Sisters organization served a dinner preceding the business session.

Proceeding the discussion of the incorporation steps the Rev. R. A. Seidel, pastor of the Methodist church, and the Rev. S. F. Shiffier, pastor of the Presbyterian church, spoke.

Committee reports, including the report of the street naming committee, membership committee, street sign committee and other committees, were heard. The membership drive is to continue until a membership of 200 has been reached.

Walter Rawlings was appointed a committee of one to repair and replace street signs in the town. S. W. Stanley, president, who presided at the meeting, reported that the electric sign recently placed in the center of town, will be lighted in the near future. County supervisors ordered the Southern California Edison company to connect the sign some time ago, Stanley reported.

He added that difficulties arose over an automatic switch which would cost $82.50 and until the matter was settled the sign would not be lighted. C. A. Vance was appointed to straighten out the sign argument.

CHAMBER WILL BE FORMED AT SUNSET BEACH

SUNSET BEACH, Aug. 23.—First steps in the organization of a chamber of commerce in this community were taken at a recent meeting of property owners at the Sunset cafe.

George W. Bus hwas elected temporary president and H. A. Russell, secretary. Mrs. Katherine James, Roy Allen and Clifford Neil were appointed a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws to be submitted at a second meeting of the organization on August 23 at 2 p. m. at the cafe.

In the preliminary discussion of the object of the body, it was developed that the taking of action to get public improvements which were halted by court action recently is the principal motive for organization.

W. D. Miller, president of the California State bank, Seal Beach, in a speech of the body, painted a verbal picture of the tideslands north of the city filled and subdivided, lagoon waters dredged and connected with Long Beach's Recreation park and the beach owned by Orange county and equipped for a permanent playground.

The guest list included Mrs. Walter Hole, Mrs. J. I. Williams, Mrs. William Gluth, Mrs. Louis Muchow, Mrs. Rollo Walling, Mrs. F. H. Goodell, Mrs. Dan Hungerford, Mrs. Tom Oliver, Mrs. E. H. ## EVENING SALUTATION

This is the night, the hour I dare not lose.
A hand has beckoned me, I know not where,
A voice has spoken, but I know not whose.
—Edward Davison.

LIKE AUTUMN LEAVES

Silently, slowly, surely, like autumn leaves falling, our pioneers are passing away. One by one their glorious and colorful physical lives fade and pale into the sear and yellow leaf, which floats gently down to mother earth and is received into her bosom.

Not so their spiritual lives—these endure. They are immortal on earth as in heaven. Their souls go marching on.

In the lives and works of those who follow in their footsteps, who reap where they have sown, who have as inspiration and guide the precept and example and ideals of the pioneers who laid broad and deep and strong the foundations of the beautiful and beneficent social and industrial structure that is ours to enjoy and perpetuate—in our lives should be reflected and effluented the courage, the fidelity and the faith in which they lived and worked and died.

ROBERT J. BLEE

In the death of Robert J. Blee, Santa Ana lost a man who for nearly half a century has been known among his friends as one of the city's best citizens. His activities covered a wide field. He was an enterprising farmer and walnut grower. Mr. Blee was among the first to enter sugar beet growing in this section, and served as a member of the board of directors of the first of the local sugar factories. He had an abiding faith in and love for his home city. And no wonder he had faith in Santa Ana, for he saw it grow from a mere village, as it was when he came here in 1880, to a city of 30,000 today. None knew its climate and its soils better than he. Along with others who settled here when the future was somewhat uncertain, he saw developments come marching into being, and along with those others who worked and planned and saw things done he enjoyed visualizing a rosy future for the city he loved.

In his church, Mr. Blee was always a leader. In fact, in his long years of residence in Santa Ana, Mr. Blee was found to be actively interested in many things. He was recognized as an upright, honorable man, genial, kindly, honest. Just as he was big in stature, so was he big in heart and big in his love for those about him.

THE WISE GERMAN FLIERS

Koehl and Loose, the German fliers who turned back after a strenuous night in the air when bad weather showed no signs of letting up, have earned much praise.

They fought through a stormy, fog-ridden night. The winds played with their plane, lifting it up and pushing it down in spite of their manipulation. Twice the plane got out of control; but the motor magnets worked perfectly and in the end the two men, keeping their nerve and using their skill, got to the west coast of Ireland before they decided that discretion was the better part of valor. Their misadventures of the night had used up excessive amounts of gasoline. Further glory was not so certain as disaster, if they went forward. Fellow-airmen say that they displayed superb airmanship in their handling of the Bremen in its 22-hour contest with the elements.

Of course they will try again, and other fliers will try the same feat. And some day the flight from inland Europe to some American city will be safely negotiated. In the meantime, it should be remembered, as all our successful ocean fliers have said repeatedly, the westward flight over the Atlantic is more hazardous than the eastward. Those who attempt it now have the fate of Nungesser and Coli to warn them. Those two men were as courageous, as skillful and as thoroughly trained as any airmen. Their failure is both a spur to further effort and an admonition to caution.

MECHANICAL POLICEMEN

Mechanical traffic signals are becoming so common as to attract little attention. Yet some of the things being done along this line are surprising. They cover a great traffic area, and they effect a great release of human time and attention.

One system of this sort, recently installed in a section of Brooklyn, N. Y., automatically releases 170 traffic policemen and, though costing only $20,000, is expected to save the city $435,000 a year in salaries. It will probably do its work more effectively, too, with greater safety to the public than the human traffic guardians could provide.

So the mechanical age proceeds. Most of our industrial and transportation work is now purely mechanical. Commerce is being mechanized. Life grows more and more mechanical.

The struggle of our civilization so far has been to develop mechanical aids and systematize machinery and people. The big struggle hereafter may be to keep us human and preserve our individuality.

IRISH SELF-RESPECT

A committee has been organized in Washington, D. C., to put on a national campaign against ridicule of the Irish race in movies or on the stage. Irish sensibilities, it appears, have been deeply wounded lately by a picture portraying two Irish families fighting for position, with frequent brawls and fist fights involving men and children.

There have been other examples, in films, plays and vaudeville, where the dignity of the Irish race has been entirely overlooked.

That isn't all. American movie and theater producers are not the only offenders. There is Sean O'Casey, Irish poet and dramatist, whose plays are frequently "egged," whether produced in London, or Dublin, or an American city. O'Casey is an intense realist. He knows his Irish and he presents them with an uncompromising veracity that goes much too far to please Irishmen in the audiences.

It is easy to sympathize with the hurt and indignant feelings of protesting Irishmen, and yet to feel that they are making a mistake to fight for their dignity in this particular way.

If art cannot portray any of the ridiculous things of life along with the sublime, things are in a worse way artistically than we had realized. To censorship of morals will now be added race censorship, and we will have negroes organizing to stop black-face comedians, Scotchmen organizing to end the Scotch joke, Jews organizing to get rid of Potash and Perlmutter or even the Feitelbaum family. And after all, that would be very foolish.

Want Kings Canyon Road

Fresno Republican

The communities of central California should ally themselves wholeheartedly with the officers and representatives of the Fresno County Chamber of Commerce who are to form a new massed action, beginning this next week, for the promotion of a Kings river canyon road.

We in this part of the state have been thinking about this road since there have been people living in the San Joaquin valley.

We have been discussing public action about it for a quarter of a century.

It is 20 years since the first legislative action was taken. That action was trifling and ineffective, as it proved. It was worthy, but it was not followed up, either by the state or by us locally.

Now that we realize how much money, year by year, we are losing through having insufficient access to this great public resource, we should get busy about it. We have the leadership. We should make sure that our support of these leaders is everything to be desired.

Perhaps a part of our difficulty about these public efforts is that we do not look back enough upon what this joint community action accomplishes. Some drives are failures. But we have had distinct successes, successes that are very profitable.

Remember, for instance, the co-operative effort for the Sierra-to-the-Sea road? It was a lot of work, and involved a lot of money. But we have that road. It is there. It is being used, to the profit of the San Joaquin valley and the state in general.

Then think how much more there is to be accomplished by working together.

This Kings river canyon road, for instance!

Poet Didn't Tell One-Half

San Francisco Chronicle

One does not have to be past middle age to find his sentiments harrowed by Farmer's Bulletin 1535F. Through that ominous publication the government tells the farmer how to shoe his own horses, information rendered necessary because the spreading chestnut tree no longer shades the village smithy. Longfellow today would not find any sparks flying like chaff. Sparks are not safe things around a gas station, and the village blacksmiths turned garage keepers are now busy filling tanks and mending tires instead of shoeing horses.

Some farmers still find it necessary to keep horses, and if those horses are to be shod the farmer must do the shoeing. Hence Bulletin 1535-F. But a farmer occasionally tinkering about the hoofs of his own horse is not the romantic figure around whose open door the boys used to gather on their way to the swimmin' hole. "The children coming home from school," is the way Longfellow put it, but that was just his New England dialectism. The blacksmith shop was much more fun on a hot summer afternoon in vacation time.

Another picturesque figure is passing to join the jolly miller and the town crier and the long line of traditions that passed before. The gasp of the tire pump is a poor substitute for the music of the anvil, and even the spread of golf does not supply the sociability nor the relaxation of pitchin' horseshoes. And as for the boys, they have no substitute for the joy of pinning the old jeans to the single gallus with a shiny new horseshoe nail. That was the last word in swank.

Progress has its advantages, but it takes something out of life, too.

PRESCRIBING THE CORRECT DIET FOR NERVOUS INDIGESTION

Some years ago the word "dyspepsia" was one to conjure with. It was the great American disease, now transferred into the possibly more scientific term "nervous indigestion."

In a recent consideration of this condition, Dr. W. C. Alvarez points out there is a tendency to overdo the use of bran and that nowadays one of the simplest ways of helping dyspeptic patients is to take away their bran mush and muffins. Bran is used because of its indigestibility, and is prescribed for persons who need roughage in the diet. People with irritable digestive organs, however, are likely to be upset by the use of bran, and to suffer with gas distention and other symptoms.

Some people require smooth, soft diets and cannot tolerate roughage. Persons with irritable bowels should eat no coarse foods containing fiber, skins, seeds or gristle. They must avoid salad with celery, tomatoes, cucumbers and pineapple; they must avoid green vegetables, raisins, berries and jams containing many seeds. If they suffer unduly with gas, they must eliminate from their diets beans, cabbage, onions, green or red peppers, melons, cucumbers and peanuts. Chewing gum is useful for cleansing the mouth and exercising the jaws, but some people swallow air with the saliva and suffer later with gas distention.

Among the items suggested by Dr. Alvarez for soft diet are a breakfast including orange juice or grapefruit; coffee, if desired, in moderation, or else chocolate, cocoa or tea; eggs with ham or bacon, avoiding the tough parts of the bacon; bread or toast with butter, and any smooth mush. Graham bread is permitted, but not coarse, whole-wheat bread.

For lunch or dinner, he suggests fruit cocktails, avoiding the fiber of the fruit, broths, cream soups and chowder, and meat, fish or chicken, avoiding the fibrous parts and the gristle. Smoked fish, pork, crab and lobster are delicate experiments, and had better be let alone. Oysters may be tried occasionally.

Such vegetables as rice, potatoes, sweet potatoes, stewed tomatoes, well-cooked cauliflower tips, asparagus tips and others, freed from fiber, may be tried. Salads may contain tender lettuce with apples or bananas, tomato jelly, or boiled eggs. Desserts may consist of simple puddings, custard, ice cream, gelatin, plain cake, and canned or stewed fruits particularly pears and peaches.

In cases of constipation, stewed fruit is to be taken once or twice a day. Prunes are the most laxative of fruits and may be eaten every morning. They should be cooked slowly until they become quite soft and the skin, if tough, should be discarded.

What People Want to Do

"The best test of what people are and what their education has done for them," says Elizabeth Adams, educational director of the American girl scouts, "is what they do when they don't have to do it."

It is a test of the right use of leisure. That is a serious problem, especially for boys and girls; for the kinds of things they enjoy doing when young determine pretty much what they will do and be when they grow up.

Education does what it can along this line, and that is a great deal. But it is badly handicapped because there is so little spontaneous play of an active and character-building sort nowadays, says Dr. Adams.

Young people, instead of playing themselves, of their own initiative, are entertained in a passive way by the movies or by more spectacular forms of "commercial recreation." That exercises merely their minds, and that gets them into a habit of day-dreaming about exercise and achievement instead of going after the exercise and achievement themselves.

They may live, in their mental lives, the lives of the heroes and heroines they see depicted, but that brings them no real self-development. Thus the habit of being passively entertained is fatal. The big thing is for boys and girls to want to do original things themselves, and go ahead and do them, and be given every possible opportunity for that.

IN PRAISE OF APPLE TREES

Our mountain firs are straight and tall;
And oaks there be with mossy knees
And pleasant shade; but, best of all
For comradeship, are apple trees.

Waist-deep in fragrant meadow grass,
A kindly company are they;
And what is richer than the mass
Of bloom that buries them in May?

Your hemlock sighs of forest comb;
Your pine of rocky height or glen;
But apple orchards breathe of home—
Their trees have always dwelt with men.

Beneath their boughs the cattle graze,
Among their leaves the robins flite,
And bountifully Autumn weighs
Their branches low with hardy fruit.

Yes, elm and beech have stately charms,
And so have sycamore and lime;
But apple trees have friendly arms
That beg a little boy to climb.

—Arthur Guiterman in "The Mirthful Lyre."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself and ma started to write things down in her little red notebook, saying, I better get some of these things before they leave my mind never to return. Let's see now, perfume for Maud Abbott, a kimono for Mrs. Liggett, French writing paper for Mrs. Hews, perfume for Blanche Hipple, a tortois shell comb for Ida Kelly, or what that Helen Therlow? she said.

Why don't you toss up? pop sed. What are you working up, a Paris shopping bewro? he sed.

It's just a few things different people want me to be sure and get them, now let's see, I think the comb was for Helen Therlow, yes it was, because Ida Kelly wants perfume, and now who else, an embroidered waist for Kitty Powers, perfume for Mrs. Maddox, perfume for Mrs. Nulty, ma sed. Have they all turned in their money? pop sed.

Handkerchiefs for Sally Byron and perfume for Mrs. Annis, wa money? ma sed. O, nobody intends to pay for anything, don't be silly, its just a custom when anybody goes to Paris for all their friends to ask them to bring back a little souvenir of some kind, she sed.

And do they expect me to pay for all that junk? pop sed, and ma sed, Don't be ridiculous, Willyum, wa have you got to do with it?

Follow me closely and you'll find out, pop sed. And he quick took the little red notebook and tore the page out and left a match and set it on fire, saying, Sick semper tyrannus, nothing doing.

Willyum I think your perfectly awful, but I must say I haff to admit im rather releved, ma sed.

And she got out her new French dictionary and started to say words to herself in case she mite haff to say them to other people wen she gets to Paris.

Old Dances

Old-time dances of the days of Merry England are being revived in London and vicinity. An All-England Festival of Folk Dancing and Singing was held recently and nearly 9000 people stepped the figures that once were popular on the village green. Tunes that were played by an old-fashioned orchestra and sung by the crowd. One feature was a display by two teams of traditional sword dancers from Durham and Yorkshire. At the time of this festival 100 dancers attended a folk song and dance school in another hall in London. Similar events are being given in other parts of England.

ZONING FOR CIVIC STABILITY

Protection of Property in Its Proper and Economical Use Prevents Unnecessary Loss.

Zoning is the most effective defense of the city planner against the destructive agencies of hazard and slipshod land uses that destroy the value, the beauty and the usefulness of the city land.

Through zoning whole areas of the city may be saved from blight by keeping out the forerunners of injurious uses of property that destroy values and cause wholesale emigrations to the suburbs.

Through zoning blighted areas that already have been half ruined may be restored by giving assurance of what the future character of the neighborhood will be.

Zoning, as almost everybody knows by now, is the division of the land of a city into districts of various shapes and sizes but of three kinds—use districts in which there will be regular and uniform regulations as to what use buildings may be devoted—residential, commercial or industrial; area districts with rules as to what area of the lot buildings may occupy—from the down-town office building taking all the land surface to the detached set back in its yard which may not occupy more than one-third the surface of the lot; and height districts with rules as to the height to which the buildings may be erected.

Zoning had its beginnings in this country about 20 years ago, came into actual practice in some few cities 10 years ago, is now a part of the law, actual or prospective, in 400 cities.

Zoning substitutes the public good for private decision as to the manner in which a property owner may use his property. It would have been considered dangerously revolutionary 40 years ago. It was barely tolerated by the courts in some states when it was begun, and in some cities the courts said that it was unconstitutional. In others, as in New Jersey, the courts made so many difficulties that the purposes of the zoning laws were practically negated.

But the supreme court of the United States in three cases decided within the last year has said unmistakably that zoning is a constitutional process, and in more than four hundred cities the work is proceeding on that basis, regardless of what might have been thought 40 years ago of such a radical invasion of private rights. The truth is that zoning protects the private owner in his rights to the enjoyment of his property in a manner that never before was possible. Therefore its great popular favor and its great democratic support.

In New Jersey the people are preparing to vote on a constitutional amendment which is designed to make it clear to the higher courts of that state that zoning has the approval of the people. If you ask a man whether he wants the government to have the power to dictate to him what type of building he may put on his lot and to what uses he may devote that building, the natural answer is "no."

But if you ask him if he wants to prevent his neighbor on the right from turning his property into a public garage and his neighbor on the left from letting his property out to a hot dog stand, then his natural answer is an explosive "yes."

Experience has demonstrated in every town that neighborhood character is the basis of stable real estate values and of comfortable home occupancy and prosperous business occupancy.

Zoning is merely a device to secure and maintain proper neighborhood conditions.

That it has democratic sanction no one can doubt. That it is the more restrictive just in proportion as the people generally have a voice in its enactment, I confidently believe.

I remember that in Washington seven years ago I was a member of the commission that first zoned the national capital and we found the people much more rigorous than the commission. The tentative zoning maps we sent to the citizens' committees. In all parts of town came back with the almost invariable comment that we were too liberal.

The people of the cities have definitely desired a sense of security. They have seen the havoc and desolation wrought by the hit-or-miss development and use of the city's land resources. They have welcomed zoning as a stabilizing agent. It has proved to be what the people wanted. Zoning is revolutionizing city life, and those cities that are yet lagging in this work will do well to send a delegation of wide awake citizens around the country to see what is up. Otherwise their cities will be handicapped in the competition for excellence in which all cities are entrants and aspirants.

Did You Ever Stop to Think

By Edison R. Waite, Secretary, Shawnee, Okla., Board of Commerce

JIMMY GREENE, EDITOR OF THE EL CENTRO (CALIF.) IMPERIAL VALLEY PRESS, SAYS: THAT unknown press to the great majority of laymen, the newspaper world has its code of ethics equally as binding as those of any other profession.

Especially in the small town newspaper field, where the paper comes in closer contact with its readers than in the metropolitan centers, an effort is made to give the readers the news in such a manner that it can be read in the home without embarrassment to any member of the family, nor arouse the less desirable attributes of the adults, or the misdirected inquisitiveness of the juveniles.

In gathering and writing news, the reporter submerges his personal feelings and opinions, dealing only in the truth without fear or favor. He makes no effort to "get back" at an enemy or "boost" a friend in what he writes. He is fair, truthful, broad-minded, honest and sincere. Being a cog in the machinery that makes up a newspaper, he takes his orders from his editor and carries them out to the best of his ability.

From the editor's standpoint, every story coming to his desk is treated with impartiality and he judges them solely on their news value, consistent with the paper's policy and a consideration of public morals. The editorial column is not used to revenge a personal wrong, nor does he hesitate to use it to condemn a public wrong. The editor tries to be tolerant, unbiased, fair, and will not allow himself to be the tool of political factions, organized industry or organized capital. His news columns are ever ready to aid any cause having for its objective the betterment of his community or upholding the ideals of the American people.

LIKE ANY ORGANIZATION, A NEWSPAPER MAKES ENEMIES, BUT BY ADHERING TO NEWS-PAPER ETHICS AND BEING CLEAN, FAIR AND SINCERE, IT WILL KEEP THE NUMBER OF ITS ENEMIES AT A MINIMUM AND INCREASE THE NUMBER OF ITS FRIENDS.

The Washrag Lament

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

THERE was a little boy who so thoroughly disliked to have his ears washed, not because of his ears, but because the cold corners of the washrag always brushed his neck and made him shiver, that now that he is a grown-up and has little boys of his own, he insists upon round washrags so there won't be any corners! I laughed first when I heard it. Then I thought, "Poor little chap, how he must have really hated it to feel so strongly after all these years! It makes me wonder if we respect the depth of feeling behind some of our children's so-called 'whimsies.'"

EVERYBODY'S ears

Have to be washed every day,
So they'll surely always hear
What the grown-ups have to say,
And I think I wouldn't mind
About my ears a single speck
If the corners of the washrag
Didn't dangle down my neck!

Mother pulls my collar down,
Rubs the washrag good with soap,
Tips my head and starts to wash,
While I shut my eyes and hope
That the corners won't hang down,
Or else take another track
Than to coldly trickle 'round
On my shoulders and my back.

If I only knew who makes
All the washrags that we buy
I should ask 'em couldn't they
Make us round ones if they'd try?
Then, you see, I wouldn't mind
About my ears a single speck
'Cause the corners of the washrag
Couldn't dangle down my neck!
